

Britain's Needs: Here Is What U. S. Can Do

Attack bombers are a prime need—10,000.

In this panel are the material with which wars are fought. They are the machines President Roosevelt has suggested be made in this country and leased to Britain. The quantities needed for a modern army of 3,000,000 men—approximately the size of Britain's—are given under each picture. The figures could vary with different army organizations but are substantially correct. No estimates are available on equipment Britain now has. Replacements are always necessary. Some of these Britain is building, but more and more must come from this country.

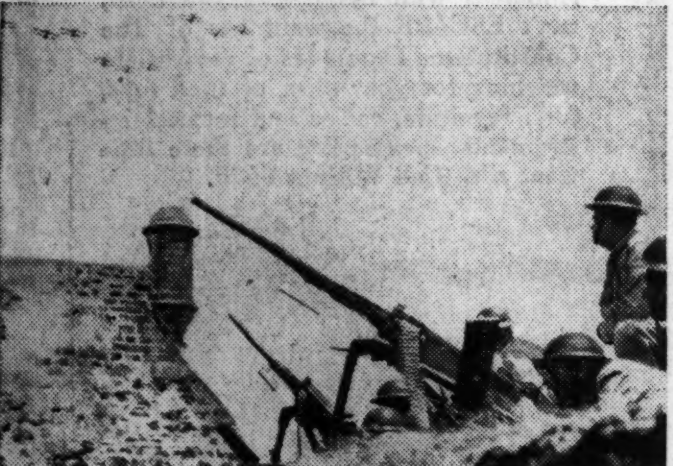

Fifty already given—100 more needed.

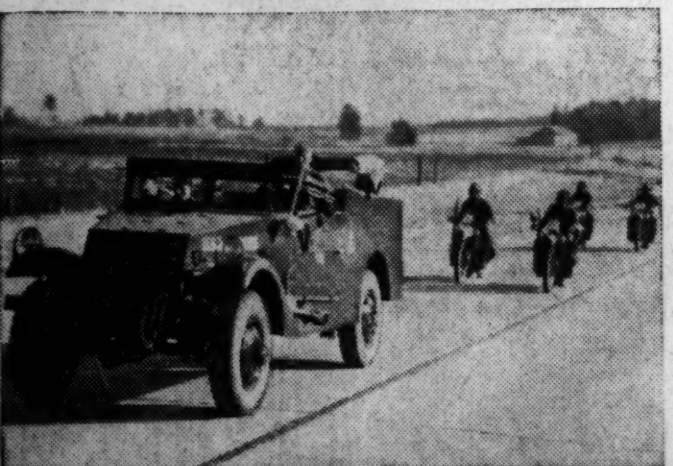

Tanks, backbone of a mechanized army—2,500 plus.

Field artillery—5,000.

Machineguns—40,000.

Scout cars and trucks—200,000 plus.

ROOSEVELT URGES 'LEASE' PLAN FOR UNLIMITED AID TO BRITAIN

Britain Warned New Invasion Attempt Near

'Roll Out the Bombers,' Beaverbrook Pleads; Hits Overconfidence.

By The Associated Press.
LONDON, Dec. 17.—Lord Beaverbrook, boss of Britain's aircraft production, officially warned the British tonight that Adolf Hitler is making "immense" preparations to invade England before next spring and called upon his plane builders to "roll out the bombers" to help meet the threat.

Britain has won day-time command of the air over the United Kingdom, Lord Beaverbrook said. In his broadcast speech, he disclosed that a "whirlwind" fighter plane had been added to the spitfires, hurricanes, and fighters which have met the German Luftwaffe. Nothing was divulged about the new plane.

Lord Beaverbrook told the British that they were "much too confident" and that "overconfidence" is not justified now. Germany is "making preparations for invasion of England before springtime—by land and sea, but principally by air," Lord Beaverbrook declared.

"So, we are warned. We know that the same measure of preparation was carried out in Germany last winter. Tanks and dive bombers to destroy the French; the same thoroughness will be employed against us when the time comes. Shortly before he spoke, the air and home security ministries reported "very slight" German day-time air activity over England. They said no bombings were reported from any section of the country during the day, but that a German bomber was shot down.

Simultaneously, the government released its latest air raid casualty figures, showing Britain has suffered more than 46,000 casualties since June. Air raid casualties reported in the United Kingdom up to December 1 were 19,288 dead and 27,252 wounded.

50,000 Nazis Move Quietly Into Italy

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP)—The Columbia Broadcasting Company's correspondent in Belgrade declared in a broadcast tonight that more than 50,000 German troops have moved quietly into Italy presumably to embark for Libya and Albania to aid Italian forces, according to information reaching highly reliable sources in Yugoslavia.

Some were expected to perform "police duties" in Italy in exchange for Italian labor in German factories, Winston Burdett, the correspondent, said.

The German movement, according to Burdett, began after the resignation December 6 of Marshal Pietro Badoglio, Italian chief of staff.

Hitler Obtains Release for Pierre Laval

Ousted Vice Premier Confers With Marshal Petain.

By The United Press.
VICHY, Dec. 17.—Adolf Hitler intervened sensationally today and obtained the release of Pierre Laval, his pro-Axis French collaborator who had been held in custody since midnight Friday when aged Marshal Henri Philippe Petain ousted him as vice premier of France.

Ousted and then arrested because of his efforts to widen his personal power, Laval obtained his freedom when Hitler's ambassador at Paris, Otto Abetz, hurried to Vichy and in conference today with Marshal Petain asked that Laval be released from Chateaudon chateau, 20 miles south of Vichy.

Laval With Abetz.
(From Bern, Switzerland, the Associated Press quoted authoritative sources as saying that Laval was with Ambassador Abetz when the latter left for Paris.

(These persons said the deposed vice-premier was in one of the automobiles belonging to the Abetz suite when the German envoy, his aides and guards, whisked out of Vichy. Laval's friends said he would accompany Abetz to Paris.)

Nazis Concerned.
Abetz and his party left Vichy by automobile at 9:30 p. m. for Paris to submit his report to Hitler and Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop. Petain's military aide, General Auguste Lauer, accompanied Abetz to the boundary of unoccupied France.

(Hitler's action in arranging for Laval's release and Nazi comment in Berlin indicated serious German concern over the Vichy situation and Nazis said the question had been posed as to whether defeated France could continue to collaborate in the German "new order" in Europe.

(Elsewhere there was speculation that Laval might now go to Paris, with Hitler's full approval, to take an important role in the control of Nazi-occupied France.

Probing Motives.
(German spokesmen in Berlin said the Reich is "continuing to examine the motives behind the change in the French government posts which are most closely concerned with relations between Germany and France.") For more than three days—since the night of Friday the 13th—Laval, whose power in unoccupied France had been exceeded only by that of Petain, had remained in the Chateaudon chateau.

The only sign of life at the castle, viewed from a near-by highway, was a pack of Eskimo dogs, which were brought back from a cruise by Laval's daughter, Jose, who is the Countess de Chambrun.

Only One Week Left To Help Atlanta's Most Needy Families

Bleak 1941 Faced by 'Opportunities' Un- less You Help.

By FRANK DRAKE.
When Christmas dawns a week from today, will Atlanta's neediest families be cheerful and happy with the greatest Christmas gift that could possibly be given them?

Will they know that during 1941 they will be assured of a chance to become self-supporting? A few of them will, because three families have been "adopted" by organizations seeking to help Opportunity families—the neediest and most deserving in the city. But others are facing a terribly bleak year—unless Atlantans come through and give aid.

You are busy now with Christ-

Opportunity No. 12

A man whose teeth have dragged him to the ground is Mr. K., breadwinner for his wife and two children. This family is your Christmas Opportunity No. 12. Mr. K., 34, is an able person. He is a carpenter and has made a modest living for his wife and his 13-year-old daughter, Cora, and Jimmy, who is eight. Men of his trade are in demand now, and Mr. K. should be working. He would be, but for his teeth.

A year ago, six months ago, Mr. K. should have seen his dentist and his doctor. He began feeling weak and rundown. Medicines he took had no effect. He was a sick man. Finally he did go to his doctor and then to the dentist. His teeth were seriously affected.

Southeastern Subfreezing Migrant Labor Weather Will Parley Opens Hit City Today

Grave Problem Foreseen After Completion of Defense Projects.

A two-day conference on the problems of housing, health and education created by the growth of a great drifting population of migratory laborers in the southeast opened here yesterday, with representatives of state departments of labor from five states, federal agencies, and labor unions in attendance.

The first day was confined largely to discussion of the question of migratory workers on national defense projects and the problem that will be presented when it is necessary for them to return to private industry for employment.

No picture was given, however, of the number of such workers now employed on such projects, except at Camp Blanding, Fla., where a surplus of laborers, unable to get jobs, slept on the ground until various relief agencies combined their forces to return them home.

Speaking on the problem that will face the nation when the defense projects are completed, Dewey L. Johnson, president of the Georgia Federation of Trades, declared:

"We are going to be faced with a genuine task then. The best way I know to handle it is to reduce the hours of work on a basis of unemployment. Where one man is working and another is not, reduce the working day of the man with a job to take care of the other man as well."

The discussion today will be based on a perennial problem common to the south; the migratory agricultural worker.

(More news of the meeting will be found on Page 4.)

Wants To Reassure London Ships, Guns, Planes Are Coming

British Could Return or Replace Supplies After War; Program To Be Given New Congress.

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—President Roosevelt announced a sweeping new plan for helping Great Britain tonight under which the United States government would take over future British war orders and release the materials for use abroad on a lease or mortgage basis to be repaid in kind after the war.

Under the plan, planes and guns, for example, would be leased to the British. After the war, if they were still in good condition, the British would be expected to give them back. If they had been destroyed, the British would be obligated to furnish this country with equivalent weapons. The President likened it to a man lending a neighbor a hose to put out a fire in his house.

In a long discussion of the proposal at his first press conference since he returned from a Caribbean cruise, he said it was still in the exploratory stage and would require time to work out both here and in London. He did not go into details about the cost of the plan to the United States, except to say that this country had sufficient money to do it.

Stressing that the best defense of the United States is to aid Great Britain, he declared emphatically that his proposal would not take this country near to actual participation in the war.

The plan, or something like it, he said, would be presented to the new congress. But he said it involved no changes in the neutrality act or the Johnson law, which forbids loans to debt defaulting nations.

Gentleman's Obligation.
The President described his objective broadly as the elimination of the dollar sign in connection with help for Britain and substitution of a gentleman's obligation.

Meanwhile, as the intensive new drive for greater armament efforts got into full swing, Secretary of the Navy Knox, announced the award of contracts for 40 additional destroyers costing approximately $253,384,875 and for an expansion of shipbuilding facilities, at an estimated cost of $8,300,000.

As a move to expedite construction in certain cases and achieve similarity of design, the Navy also announced that contracts for seven destroyers and two cruisers previously announced had been cancelled and transferred to other yards.

Another help-for-Britain development during the day was the disclosure by Secretary of State Hull that, armed with confidential data on England's needs and the possibilities of a new German attempt to knock out the British Isles, he had taken a personal hand in urging defense commissioners and other officials to the utmost effort in speeding up American aid.

Under the plan outlined by Mr. Roosevelt the United States might take over future British orders for armaments in this country, then lease or mortgage those products to Britain on their completion. Then, after the war ended, Britain would return the war supplies if they were in good shape, or replace them.

To a question whether he was seeking to give definite assurance that England was not going to run out of supplies, the President replied that that was the point.

Asked whether the program would be more likely to involve the United States in Europe's conflict, Mr. Roosevelt replied with a definite negative. He said the United States now was doing all it can to see that Britain gets vital supplies and that the new program would merely be a continuation of that procedure, in a different form.

Like Home on Fire.
The President compared the prospective arrangement, which he said still is under study from a legal standpoint, with the aid a person would extend if his neighbor's home caught fire.

If the person had a hose that could be brought into play, Mr. Roosevelt declared, he would connect it to his neighbor's hydrant.

Duke Will Accept Embassy Post If It Is Offered, He Tells Press

Windsors Sail From Miami for Nassau Home.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 17.—(AP)—While thousands waited to wave him a farewell, the Duke of Windsor said today he would accept the post of ambassador to the United States should it be offered and "if I thought it was in the interest of our two countries."

He made the statement at a press conference aboard Axel Wennergren's yacht Southern Cross, which brought the duke and duchess here just a week ago, shortly before they sailed on their return voyage to Nassau.

The duchess, apparently completely recovered from the major dental operation that necessitated their visit here, stood beside the duke on the deck to acknowledge the party's cheers of a large crowd on the pier.

Governor Issues Yule Proclamation

Department heads in the state government will decide how many holidays their employees will be allowed for Christmas.

This order was issued yesterday in a Christmas proclamation by Governor Rivers.

He ordered that all departments be closed on Christmas Day, but added department heads might allow their employees additional time off provided they did not disturb the normal operation of the departments. Several department heads were working out arrangements whereby the employees would get more than one day.

In the proclamation the Governor called on Georgians to observe the day "with prayers of humility, reverence and thanksgiving."

Parole Violator May Complete Sentence Here

Man Arrested 11 Days After Identification Order Is Issued.

Ralph Beasley Moss, arrested as a conditional release violator in Hattiesburg, Miss., 11 days after an identification order was issued by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, probably will be returned to Atlanta to serve the remainder of his sentence, the FBI's Atlanta field office reported yesterday.

Moss, with nine aliases and a criminal record extending back to 1931, was arrested by a United States marshal in Macon in 1936 charged with violating the National Motor Vehicle Theft Act and given a year and a day in Chulicthe. Released nine months later, Moss has twice since violated his parole, officials said.

The FBI also reported that Allen Carter Miller, arrested recently in Lexington, Ky., had been placed under $1,000 bond and held for United States district court in Valdosta. Miller, charged with impersonating a RFC employee, allegedly forged a check and cashed it in Moultrie, representing himself as H. C. Marshall, of the RFC. Miller, FBI records show, has a record as a forger extending back to 1923.

Threat To Hold Up Funds for Market Flayed

Columbus Roberts Says State Has Right to Federal Aid.

Georgia's outgoing commissioner of agriculture, Columbus Roberts, yesterday attacked any attempt to withhold federal funds to aid in the construction of Georgia's new $500,000 state farmers' market.

In a review of his administration in the Market Bulletin, Commissioner Roberts said government funds have been provided to build similar markets in other cities.

There have been threats that Georgia might be denied federal funds for the project, although work in clearing the site for the market already has begun.

"After all," Roberts wrote, "Georgia people help to pay the taxes that provide federal funds for such projects, and they should get some for work of this kind within the state."

He added that Georgia farmers would expect their senators and representatives to use their influence in helping to obtain the federal money for the market.

pouring poison into the bloodstream throughout his system.

Doctors and dentists treated him to see if they could save his teeth. They could not. Recently every tooth he had was extracted. Mr. K.'s reaction was not all they expected. He became sicker. Though the cause of his trouble undoubtedly has been removed, he is in such bad condition that it may be months before he will be able to swing his hammer again and earn wages. He had absorbed so much poison from his teeth the doctors say he is still in great danger.

Mr. K.'s rent has been paid, by a kindly lady, through December.

But what is to become of Mr. and Mrs. K. and Cora and Jimmy next year while this husband and father is trying to get well—one one knows. This family could squeeze through, with the barest of necessities, if Atlantans gave them but $20 a month. As little as that!

CONFEREES—Federal, state and labor union officials met here yesterday for a two-day conference on the problems created by the thousands of migratory workers in agriculture and on national defense projects. Pictured left to right are three who led the discussion, Ben T. Huiet, Georgia Commissioner of Labor; Forrest H. Shuford, North Carolina Labor Commissioner, and Mrs. Clara M. Beyer, of Washington, assistant director of the division of labor standards of the U. S. Department of Labor.

U. S. Assistance Urged To Care For Migrants

Advance Information on Defense Labor Needs Held Essential.

The problem of the migratory laborer on federal defense projects yesterday was given the attention of representatives of departments of labor from five southeastern states federal agencies, and labor leaders at a meeting here.

The consensus at the first day's session seemed to be:

1—That the army and navy should inform labor unions and state employment services of contemplated construction sufficiently in advance so that these agencies could prepare for the sending of adequate, but not surplus, labor into the area.

2—That state departments of labor, through every means of reaching the public available to them, should present clearly what labor needs on defense projects will be—numbers of skilled and unskilled workers needed, etc., and should use every means to discourage a surplus of labor from traveling long distances on the chance of getting work.

3—That federal, state and local health departments should co-operate to provide sanitary facilities and medical protection to workers and their families.

4—That federal, state and local school authorities should co-operate in providing adequate facilities for the children of migratory workers during the period of their residence in the area.

5—That, where adequate housing facilities are not available, all interested parties, including the Army or Navy, should join forces to find adequate housing for workers and their families.

No suggestion as to how these things could be financed or administered were discussed.

But pause for a moment and think of the desperate plight of the families who are the Christmas Opportunities—annually presented by The Constitution in co-operation with the Family Welfare Society.

Here are mothers, abandoned by their husbands, left to care for hungry, school-age kids. Here are men temporarily incapacitated by accidents. Here are widows with mouths to feed and no money. Here are the city's neediest families, the ones most deserving of your help. Will you let this Christmas dawn on you without doing something to alleviate their suffering? Deep down, can you?

Mrs. C., who has worked so hard supporting her daughter and son that she is on the verge of a physical and nervous breakdown, needs $30 a month to see her through until she is well. Lacking still is $310.

These contributions are appreciated. They help. No matter how small the gift, the money aids in this tremendous fight of worthy men and women to rehabilitate themselves and become self-supporting. Every family whose story is told by this newspaper has a definite chance to become independent. Each only needs a little help. Give it to them, Atlantans.

Georgia's Sister States Get More Defense Funds

Georgia's sister states are getting the lion's share of national defense money, according to figures made public yesterday by E. H. Welch, of Washington, Ga., member of the bureau of statistics of the State Department of Labor, as he appeared before the conference on migratory labor here.

Of a total of 300 million dollars' worth of ships, guns, tents, blankets and general construction contracted for, between July 1 and November 1, South Carolina got $112,600,000; Alabama $56,600,000; Florida $49,400,000; Georgia $31,000,000, and North Carolina $19,000,000.

AROUND Atlanta

WITH THE CONSTITUTION STAFF

Children of Faith school will give a pageant, "Christmas Boys," in the school auditorium at 7:30 o'clock tonight. Gloria Hutchins, as the queen, and Carlton Malcolm, as the king, have the leading roles.

Atlanta Advertising Club will hold its annual Christmas party and election of officers at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon in Rich's tea room.

Optimist Club of Atlanta will hold its annual Christmas party for members of the Junior Optimist Boys' Club on Bankhead avenue at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow night. Following the party the club will give a party at the Y. M. C. A. for members of the Y. M. C. A. Boys' Club. Boys at both affairs will be given gloves, shoes, and fruit and candy.

Exchange Club will give its annual Christmas party for the children's ward at Grady hospital at 2 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon.

Atlanta's federal employees will enjoy a two-day Christmas holiday at the order of President Roosevelt. Besides Christmas Day off they will be excused from work Christmas Eve, Washington announced yesterday. There will be a few exceptions, of course, FBI agents hot on the trails of criminals and certain defense workers will observe business as usual.

Students in Low 8 at Bass Junior High school have invited the public to inspect their room which has been decorated with Christmas colors and ornaments and a series of drawings by students, depicting the birth of Christ. T. F. Staton is teacher of the class. Students who had charge of the decorations are Sylvia Stein, Dorothy Plunkett, Louise Moulder, Johnny Rainer, Gerald Rowden, and George McWhorter. The room is open each afternoon from 2:45 to 5 o'clock.

Christmas Message will be given over station WGST at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon by the Rev. George McLarty, pastor of Temple Baptist church.

Central Park School Glee Club will present a pageant entitled "The Prince of Peace" at 8 o'clock tomorrow night in the East Point city auditorium for the benefit of the Central Park P-T. A.

Washington Lodge 943, Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, Southern Railway general offices, has elected these officers: Allen G. Rice Jr., president; Russell W. Barnhill, vice president; Odessa M. Gilbreath, recording secretary, and C. M. Kelly, treasurer.

Dr. Charles D. Hubert, director of the school of religion at Morehouse College, will discuss the place of the Negro church in the community as the last speaker on the Negro Problems forum at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the Atlanta University library.

Atlanta Truth Center meets at 11 o'clock this morning at the Biltmore hotel.

Goodwill Industries chapel service at 8 o'clock tonight will present the Rev. Woolsey E. Couch, pastor of St. John's Episcopal church, of College Park.

Court Confirms Sale Of South Georgia Tract

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. VALDOSTA, Ga., Dec. 17.—With exception of minor details, the condemnation and sale of about 5,200 acres of land in Lanier and Lowndes counties was confirmed in the United States court here yesterday by Judge Bascom S. Deaver, presiding.

The land titles now vested in the United States government and are to be transferred to the Department of Agriculture. The land will be used in furthering submarginal soil erosion control and to provide homes for tenant farmers who desire to become farm owners. Another tract adjoining this property had been previously acquired.

Comet Seen First Time With the Naked Eye

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Professor William H. Bartlett, executive curator of the Hayden planetarium, said several amateur astronomers in New Jersey reported they had seen the Cunningham comet tonight "for the first time with the naked eye." "It appears to be a hazy brightness," he said. "To see it, you have to know where to look—about 20 degrees above the horizon slightly north of due west—and field glasses are advisable."

Atlanta Man Is Shot While Cleaning Rifle

Frank Hayes, 41, an engineer with the State Highway Department, was admitted to Grady hospital in fair condition last night after he had been accidentally shot in the abdomen with a .22 calibre rifle he was cleaning. The accident happened on the front porch of his home at 389 Ormond street, Hayes told police.

M. A. Rowden To Head Masonic Lodge Here

M. A. Rowden last night was elected worshipful master of Panthersville Lodge No. 543, F. & A. M.

Other officers are: O. H. Spratt, senior warden; F. J. Shelton, junior warden; L. D. Tucker, treasurer; K. L. Vandiver, secretary; W. E. Smith, senior deacon; E. L. Leavelle, junior deacon; C. N. Shaw, senior steward; Glenn Jarrett, junior steward, and J. T. Stanley, tyler.

Whether you have a few suitcases or many items of furniture to be moved you can find somebody for the job by turning to Classification 84—"Moving and Storage."

A. C. Belcher, City Health Aide, Is Dead

Native Georgian Resident of Atlanta for 66 Years.

A. C. (Doc) Belcher, city health inspector for 33 years and one of the leaders in work at the Baptist Tabernacle for more than a quarter of a century, died yesterday afternoon at his residence, 513 Atwood street, S. W., after a brief illness. He was 73.

A native of Whitesburg, Ga., he came to Atlanta as a child and had resided here for 66 years. Prior to becoming connected with the city health department, he was in the grocery business here.

Long active in work at the Tabernacle, he was for 27 years treasurer of the Sunday school there. During 36 years' membership at the church, he missed services only four times. He is survived by a step-son, Royce Dobbs; a sister, Mrs. Samuel S. Jones, of Jonesboro, Ga., and two grandchildren, Miss Jane Dobbs, and Timothy Belcher Dobbs.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the Sunday school of the Tabernacle, in accordance with a request he expressed before death.

Pallbearers will be W. Paul Willis, J. Roy Walraven, Horace J. Pope, James I. Davenport, William A. Johnson, and Lon C. Johnson.

Deacons of the Tabernacle and officers of the Atlanta health department will serve as an honorary escort. Burial will be in West View cemetery under the direction of Awtry & Lowndes.

British Food Ministry Fixes Turkey Prices

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—The food ministry today fixed the price of undressed Christmas turkeys at 2 shillings, 10 pence a pound (about 57 cents) because butchers were raising their prices.

The ministry's order indicated a change of heart. Lord Woolton, food minister, in reply November 26 to a question whether turkey prices would be controlled, asserted it was not his business to control luxuries.

Turpentine Men Plan Discussion of Program

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. VALDOSTA, Ga., Dec. 17.—President Harley Langdale, of the American Turpentine Farmers' Association Co-operative, has announced a group meeting of naval stores producers will be held here Friday.

Operators in the immediate Valdosta area will discuss the 1941 naval stores production program as outlined and required by the federal government.

Jay Ward, of Washington, D. C., chief of the department in charge of the conservation work, will attend the meeting and present details of the work for the coming year. Joe Vensco, of Atlanta, associate United States forester, and L. E. House, of Jacksonville, Fla., district supervisor of the United States Forest Service, also will be present.

Roosevelt's Reception Entertains Judiciary

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—A reception for the judiciary opened the formal White House social season tonight in place of the diplomatic reception, which usually raises the curtain.

The diplomatic reception was cancelled this year on account of the war to avoid embarrassment to the envoys of warring countries.

Prior to tonight's reception the President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at dinner. Their guests included the chief justice and Mrs. Hughes, the attorney general and Mrs. Jackson, the solicitor general and Mrs. Biddle, the chairman of the securities commission and Mrs. Frank, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Ernst, of New York, and Edna Ferber, the novelist, among others.

Air Instructor, Student Die in Pensacola Crash

PENSACOLA, Fla., Dec. 17.—(AP)—A flight instructor and a student pilot were killed when a training seaplane dived into Pensacola Bay from a low altitude, the naval air station reported late today.

The men were listed as Ensign Clarence M. Dannelly Jr., of Montgomery, Ala., the instructor, and Max Frederick Lettau, of Manchester, Mass., aviation machinists' mate second class.

The accident occurred while the pair, together with instructors and students in several other planes, were practicing water landings. The ship came down pontoons up and shortly afterward sank in 30 feet of water.

Windsors Sail For Nassau on Sleek Yacht

Miami University Band Plays National Anthem for Farewell.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 17.—(AP)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor stood erect today as the University of Miami band struck up "God Save the King" and the national anthem just as their sleek yacht slid clear of the landing and sailed in their return to Nassau. While Edward, with his wife, posed at the rail for last-minute pictures, a spectator shouted, "We're all with you, Edward. We want to see you go to Washington."

The duke smiled and waved. Speaking for newsmen and the radio before boarding the yacht, Edward said he and the duchess were "deeply touched" by the expressions of sympathy and good wishes.

He spoke of the trimly-clad duchess, who stood beside him, as "my silent partner of the microphone."

Asked at the press conference about her reaction to the United States after being away for years, the duchess declared: "I'm proud of my country."

Later she commented: "Everything is so vital and alive here."

Accused Swindler Is Bound Over

Miss Z. C. Roles, 46, president of Roles, Inc., contracting firm, yesterday was bound over to the Fulton county grand jury on three charges of cheating and swindling and one of assault and battery by Judge Luther Z. Rosser, of the civil court of Fulton county.

The defendant is charged with fraudulently obtaining $4,750 from Mrs. W. M. Smith, elderly seamstress of 1267 Arkwright place; $249 from Mrs. Lillie Caulder, 936 Crew street, and $330 from Mrs. Susie White, 511 Lester street, and with an attack on Mrs. Caulder.

Miss Roles is also under 6-to-10-year sentence in DeKalb county. She was convicted of forgery of a loan deed in connection with the Smith case.

DeKalb Loan Body To Pay Dividends

The semi-annual dividend was declared for stockholders of the Decatur Building & Loan Association at a meeting of the board of directors Tuesday afternoon. Chairman W. H. Bowen reported yesterday.

Approximately $50,000 will be distributed to members of the association, Bowen said. Assets of the group have now reached more than $3,000,000, he reported, and during the past year new loans totaling more than $1,000,000 were made.

Father, Son Hunted In Officer's Killing

ST. CHARLES, Va., Dec. 17.—(UP)—A posse of nearly 1,000 heavily armed men tonight searched the mountains for Clyde William Buchanan, about 40, and his 19-year-old son, Clyde Jr., charged with shooting three policemen, one fatally. The manhunt was aided until nightfall by three planes. The planes were to take off at dawn laden with hand grenades to be dropped on the fugitives if they are discovered barricaded in the mountains, the sheriff's office reported.

The shooting occurred late today in Cumberland Gap, where Tennessee, Kentucky and Virginia come together.

The officers had gone to Buchanan's automobile trailer to arrest the father on a warrant charging he was a fugitive from Alexandria, Va., on a robbery charge.

Author Will Bake 32 Fruit Cakes

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. COLUMBUS, Ga., Dec. 17.—Carson Smith McCullers, young author of "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter," which critics say places her in the front ranks of American writers, has come to spend Christmas with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lamar Smith.

She came early to make fruit cakes for her new friends in New Yorke's literary world. With her mother's aid, the author is making 32 large fruit cakes, every one of which will be tied with red ribbon and sprays of holly and go to New York with greetings from the south.

While here she is working on her new book which will have an adolescent girl as its heroine.

13 Members Of 5 Families Perish in Blast

Explosion Wrecks Downtown Tenement in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 17.—(AP)—A blast that left almost no two bricks joined by mortar, nor timbers by spikes, killed 13 men, women and children of five families in an old downtown tenement before dawn today.

Included among the dead was a baby born to Mrs. Lillian Schnetzer, 42, while she lay buried in the wreckage. Mrs. Schnetzer, her husband, Frank, and four other children in the family also perished.

A dozen other persons, saved only because they lived on upper floors of the three-story building and came down on top of the rubble instead of under it, were injured, none seriously. Joseph Feldman, deputy state fire marshal, investigated a report that three crows filled with a highly explosive fluid had been stored in the basement by a tenant. Others theorized that leaking gas was responsible, although A. C. Moorhaus, vice president of a utility firm, said a preliminary investigation indicated such was not the case.

Lloyd George Turns Down Lothian Post

Advanced Age Given as Reason; Churchill Presses Sharply.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—(Wednesday)—(AP)—The London News Chronicle says that David Lloyd George has declined the ambassadorship to the United States, although pressed strongly by Prime Minister Churchill to accept.

Lloyd George, the paper added, refused the post in consideration of his advanced age—78.

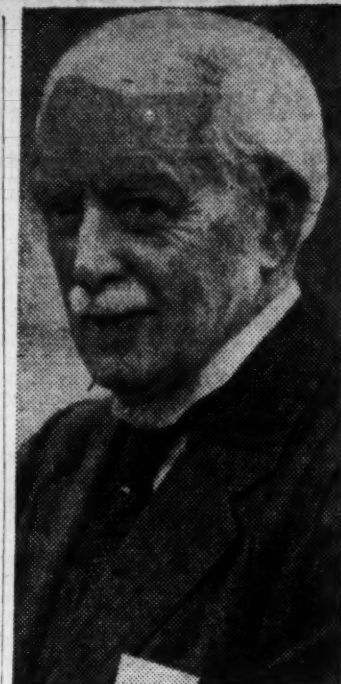

Last night, an authoritative source said several more days might be required to find the "ideally suited" man for the job, which was vacated by the recent death of Lord Lothian.

Industrial Activity Reaches New High

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported today that industrial production in November reached a new peak of 131 per cent of the 1935-39 average and that it might average 135 per cent in December.

Consumer incomes were said to be increasing along with the improvement in industrial activity, resulting in an expanded demand for farm products.

The bureau said farm income in November apparently was higher than a year earlier, due especially to continued heavy marketings of hogs and cotton and to a higher level of prices received by farmers than in November last year.

REFUSED POST—David Lloyd George yesterday was reported to have refused the ambassadorship to the United States despite strong pressure by Prime Minister Churchill.

Third Victim Of Auto Crash Succumbs Here

Jack L. Stanley Dies; Triple Rites To Be Held Today.

Jack L. Stanley, of 245 Casson street, N. E., died yesterday at Grady hospital, the third victim in one family of an automobile-street car crash Sunday on Hollywood road at the entrance to Magnolia cemetery.

The other two victims, his wife, and her mother, Mrs. A. F. London, died at Grady hospital shortly after the wreck.

Triple funeral services for the three will be held at 11:30 o'clock this morning at Spring Hill with the Rev. K. O. White and the Rev. Horace Smith officiating. Burial will be in Magnolia cemetery.

Governor's Action Pleasing to Sheriff

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 17.—(AP) Sheriff Guy Joyner, of Memphis, who has warned that he would march across the state line and chop up near-by Mississippi gambling joints, said tonight he would withdraw his threat if the operators "close up and get out" as ordered by Mississippi authorities. "I think the Governor has done a good day's work," Joyner said when informed that Mississippi's Governor Paul B. Johnson had his chief military aide, Major General Thomas J. Grayson, pay midnight visits to various state-line resorts and give the "close up and get out" or "else" order.

Joyner said, "Of course there's no need of my going down there if Mississippi is going to clean them out."

Clarkston Lodge Names G. W. Lee

George W. Lee was elected worshipful master of the Clarkston Lodge No. 492, F. & A. M., it was announced yesterday.

Other officers elected were: Joe A. Cain, senior warden; A. T. Nestor, junior warden; Joe C. Lowe, secretary; W. W. Hames, treasurer; John P. Bailey, tyler, and Clem Jolly, George Ross and Rev. Harry Spivey, trustees.

The following were appointed: H. E. Pierce, senior deacon; G. G. Bannister, junior deacon; Jack Herrin, senior steward; Jack Freeman, junior steward; and E. S. Cowan, Jr., chaplain. Eric Koch, C. C. Leach and C. M. Anderson form the committee on finance.

Christmas Party At U. S. Hospital

A pageant of the Nativity and a series of skits, songs and dances featured an entertainment at United States Veterans Hospital 48 last night when Betty Harrison Jones and Morton T. Nicholas Chapters, Disabled American Veterans, staged a combined Christmas party before patients and visitors in the recreation hall at the hospital.

The pageant, entitled "Silent Night," was given by a group from the Salvation Army. Music was furnished by the Atlanta Civic Orchestra, under the direction of Walter Sheets.

The recreation hall was decorated by flowers presented by Miss Elsa McCall, president of the Atlanta Debutante Club, who brought them in person from her own debut party, which was held yesterday afternoon.

3 Fast Bombers Ready for Britain

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 17.—(UP)—Three Douglas twin-motored bombers, said to be capable of approximately 400 miles an hour, flew here today for shipment to Great Britain.

Crates were ready for the planes which will be dismantled by tomorrow morning, although the date of shipment was secret. It was reported without confirmation that additional planes would be sent here for dismantlement and shipment.

'Immortality' Baby Returned To Her Mother

Metaphysicians Planned To Show Immortality Is Possible.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Eighteen-month-old Jean Gaunt, for whom a group of metaphysicians sought to attain immortality, left a mighty mansion today to return to her tenement home—and mother.

Gone were the trappings of the "perfect" life—the $2,500,000 home built by the Vanderbilt clan on Long Island—the famous gold room of Queen Anne design—the private nurse on 24-hour duty.

"I can think of no child outside of royalty who might have had a better start in life," said James B. Shafer, leader of the Royal Fraternity of Master Metaphysicians.

The metaphysicians installed the blue-eyed child in the mansion 15 months ago when her parents were unable to support her. They planned to rear her in their

Georgia Girl, 17, Dying of Lukemia

ALBANY, Ga., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Anxious, heartbroken parents sit at the hospital bedside of their 17-year-old daughter and pray.

Only a miracle, say the doctors, can save her from an illness diagnosed as acute lukemia.

"Send out a message," beg the stricken parents, "all over the United States, so that prayers may be offered asking that the life of this lovely young girl be spared."

The girl, desperately ill in Archbold Memorial hospital, is Ann Singletary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Singletary, of Pelham. She was stricken a short time ago while a student at Georgia State College for Women, Milledgeville.

belief that illness and death are caused by destructive thinking—and that immortality "can be actually achieved, not as a ghost or spirit."

"Now the parents have adjusted themselves and they want her back," Shafer said.

Will Baby Jean remain "immortal"? "Perhaps her mother can do it," he said. "Henceforth she must be the guiding spirit. We will always love Jean with a love that can never die."

Hundreds Flee To Shelters in Dynamite Blast

Explosion Causes General Property Damage Mile From Plant.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 17.—(AP)—An explosion in the great Bjorkborn dynamite plant founded by Alfred Bernhard Nobel of peace prize fame seriously injured at least 20 persons and shattered many buildings in the southern city of Karlskoga where thousands of inhabitants immediately ran underground into air-raid shelters.

Firemen fought desperately to prevent raging fires from reaching powder magazines. After a five-hour fight the government defense staff said they had mastered the flames which threatened the extensive munitions and steel works.

It was not immediately determined whether there were any dead.

A great blast knocked out windows, razed some buildings, broke telephone lines and caused general property damage for a distance of a mile from the plant.

Part of the city had to be evacuated.

Besides the 20,000-odd inhabitants of Karlskoga the Bjorkborn employees took refuge underground for several hours until advised by authorities that the magazines were safe from the flames.

GETS RADIO PERMIT.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Communications Commission actions today included the granting of a permit to R. G. LeTourneau, of Toccoa, Ga., for a new station to operate on 1420 kilocycles, 250 watts power, unlimited time.

This big, roomy, 115-hp. Buick Special 4-door sedan, with new super-roomy styling and Fireball Eight engine. Only . . . . .

YES, SIR—we mean just that! If you can find any item in the price of this big, Fireball-powered 1941 Buick that represents a "pack" or hidden charge of any kind—we'll refund double the amount of that item!

We'll give you twice what our written guarantee calls for—because if there's any such unexplained item in our prices, we want to know it so we can take it out.

You shouldn't have any trouble spotting such charges.

For we quote you plainly itemized prices on all cars. We hand you an itemized invoice that covers every charge when you buy. We give every buyer a written guarantee—because we want all of our customers to know they get fair and square dealing here.

But maybe you haven't been aware of the vicious practice called "packing" new-car prices.

In that case, drop in and ask for your free copy of "What You Get for What You Pay," which explains all about "packing."

It's interesting and informative reading that may save you many dollars. And besides, dropping in to get a copy gives you a good excuse for looking over (and maybe even trying out) that big honey of a 1941 Buick that everybody's going for these days.

WHAT IS A "PACK"?

A pack is an extra item slipped into the delivered price of a new car to enable a dealer to offer more for your present car than it is really worth in trade.

It is a sort of "bait" intended to make you think you're getting a better deal than you actually are. Ask us for a free copy of "What You Get for What You Pay" and see how the "pack" can cost you money.

Aid to Britain

In the sharp contrast between American persuasion and American action there is an irony not only cruel but potentially dangerous. That this country generally is convinced of the necessity of England's triumph in its defense of human liberty, if for no other reason than the purely selfish one that a British victory is an American victory, is apparent from every poll of public opinion. By overwhelming majorities, we insist that England must conquer, that Nazism must be destroyed, and that America must assist this end by every means short of war. For endless months we have talked vaingloriously of "aid to Britain," have coddled our pride in the vocal sympathies that bolster morale but that do not defend a nation.

If we as a nation are convinced that in helping England we help ourselves and all free men everywhere—and of this persuasion there is no doubt—then the time for real aid to Britain, for material sacrifice and contribution, not for dawdling, trifling, oratorical aid is heavily upon us. Let it be remembered that heretofore when we have spoken of "aid to Britain" we have meant the kind of "aid" that a merchant offers a customer in permitting the cash sale of goods for considerable profit to himself. Is this what Americans truly want in the matter of "aid to Britain"? Does the transfer of a few outmoded warships, the sale of a handful of planes, and the gift of a few packets of foodstuffs and toothpaste represent our contribution to the cause of freedom? Surely let us hope not.

Nazi Germany is no force to be trifled with, no fire with which we can play as we are now gambling. This country, which loves peace but which loves democracy more, has it within its power to harass and impede the spread of Nazism, to foster the triumph of British freedom, and thus to forestall its own peril by means far more powerful than the donation of shelter-kits, and yet far short of warfare.

Such a program of real aid to Britain might include many measures short of war, but there are some it most certainly must include and these promptly.

First, we must repeal the Johnson Act as soon as possible. Passed in all good faith at a time when all men underestimated the magnitude of Hitler's power and ambition, this act has become a grinning monster to separate us from our obvious duty. But congress should go farther than merely to permit the sale of war materials on credit to England. Where is there "aid to Britain" in selling goods for profit? We should grant to England all the money she needs, without any interest rates whatever, with the sole understanding that the money is to be spent for materials of war. Of this there can now be no question. Would we profit on another's blood? On an ally's life?

Second, we should start shipping American goods to England on American vessels protected by American men of war. Already, by our own submission, we have permitted Nazi raiders to drive American shipping from the seas; we have hundreds of vessels drifting in port; the British badly need assistance in the long haul across the Atlantic. If Nazi vessels insist on acts of piracy, there is no reason why our vessels must consider themselves impotent targets of attack. British destroyers and cruisers, freed from the long convoy service, would soon put an end to German piracy operating out of the channel ports.

Third, we should follow the advice of Senator George, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, by instituting the 24-hour day and the seven-day week for war industries. In this dawdling, in running munitions plants only 40 hours a week out of 168 possible hours, less than 25 per cent of the time, we gamble as nowhere else. Time, as we all recognize, is now everything with us. Why, with thousands of men unemployed and available for work, do our factories shut their doors on Fridays?

Fourth, we should make greater use of our counter-espionage powers. Attorney-General Jackson has ruled that this nation is powerless to interfere with the destruction of materials belonging to England and now to this country. Such a situation is fantastic. Every effort must be made to root out, as ruthlessly as possible, the horde of spies and saboteurs known to infest our industry like a scourge of vermin.

With these acts, all short of war but all truly designed as "aid to Britain," we, as a democracy, can fulfill our duty to the people's wishes, to our high duty, to our great conscience, and to our destiny in the world. One does not toss firecrackers at the burglar coming through the door. Now is the time for sterner measures.

On being reassured, we have no doubt the little girl of the editorial immediately got off a letter, "Yes, Santa Claus, there is a Virginia!"

Federal Waterway Control

The Supreme Court decision that federal control extends over all rivers and streams which may, by "reasonable" improvements, be made navigable, adds one more item to the long story of expanding federal jurisdiction in this country.

The decision, overriding the objections of 41 states, may open the door to a wider use of the federal authority than has hitherto been dreamed.

It would appear possible, under this ruling, for the federal government to assume all control over power projects where the source of power is flowing water. For, certainly, the great power plants are all situated on streams which, somewhere in their course, are either navigable or could easily be made so. And, besides, what is "navigable?" Navigable for what? A shallow draft canoe?

Furthermore it would seem logical to assume that, under the ruling, the federal government could assume jurisdiction over any state activity, or industry in any state, which might conceivably pollute the waters of any stream.

The possibilities are inexhaustible. They might, even, involve the passing of the last remnant of states' rights. It will be interesting to read the full text of the decision and to watch the interpretations which the legal minds of future years may place upon it.

The consensus on Dies is that the tireless inquisitor gets off on the right track on the wrong foot.

Few Unemployed Slaves

Reports of sabotage and underground rebellion are coming with increasing frequency today from Norway and Denmark and Holland. Yet the Nazis say that labor, particularly in Norway, is more fully employed than ever before. It is passing strange that laborers in these territories are not content if they are employed under decent conditions and if business is nearly normal in these countries.

The hitch is simply that the Germans are compiling favorable statistics on employment by the use of the unemployed in forced labor, called a "work procurement program." This involves the construction of military highways, "railroad maintenance" chiefly needed because of sabotage and "housing," the building of barracks for German troops and the repair of buildings damaged by bombs and shells.

For example, a military road is being built from Oslo to Trondheim, Narvik, Hammerfest and ending at Kirkenes in the far north of Norway. This is a stupendous undertaking, and its chief and almost only value is for military purposes. Uncounted Norwegians undoubtedly are being kept "happy" under German guns building this road.

There isn't much unemployment in the Nazi-ruled nations. The workers are all being harnessed to the needs of the German military machine.

Athens reports another 500 Italians captured in the Albanian back country. Was it a Greek, then, who built a better mousetrap in the wilderness?

Repercussions of the mighty defense effort, now swinging into high, begin to be felt even in the pool rooms, as thousands are thrown into employment.

Editorial Symposium

AS LABOR DISPUTES CONTINUE.

With strikes and threats of strikes handicapping America's defense program, suggestions concerning ways and means of curbing such tie-ups are considered by newspapers. The MINNEAPOLIS TRIBUNE backs the suggestion of Senator Ball, proposing legislation along the lines of the railway conciliation act and Minnesota's labor relations act, "which has operated to avert a great many strikes. The nub of it is the compulsory waiting period, giving time for a conciliation agency to bring the parties together."

The SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE declares that "Strikes must be stopped, not by forbidding them by law but by not having them. . . . Cooperation does not mean surrender but the will to a square deal. Disputants in defense industry . . . should have a tribunal in which to sue for just settlement. This would not attack labor's right to strike. It would permit labor to reserve that weapon as a last resort." And the BUFFALO NEWS insists that "what is needed to assure continuous production . . . is a system of arbitration which would apply to labor disputes that pass beyond the conciliation stage. . . . In other words . . . employers and workers should agree to abide by the decision of an impartial arbitration body."

Recalling the means used by President Wilson during the first World War to curb strikes, the WASHINGTON STAR points out, "He did it by writing a bluntly phrased letter warning the strikers that unless they immediately returned to work in accordance with an order by the National War Labor Board they would be blacklisted by the government for all defense work and would forfeit all claim to exemption from the draft on the ground of employment in war production. . . . They went back to work."

MR. KNUDSEN'S APPEAL

By DOROTHY THOMPSON.

The problems that confront us in the field of defense are partly technical, partly political, partly economic and partly psychological. Airplanes, especially airplane engines, are not something that can just be turned out on one day to another. The production of an airplane engine, in contrast, let us say, to a motorcar engine, is a much more refined and exquisite process. A motorcar engine is a stamping job, as it was explained to me by a motor engineer. But airplane engines can't just be stamped out. The allowable "tolerances" are ten times higher for an automobile motor than for an airplane motor, and a mere pin scratch can ruin the latter.

The mass production of airplanes involves extremely complicated tooling processes, and they cannot be completed from one week or one month to the next. Also, there are "bottlenecks," and one of these, if I have been correctly informed, is in the field of labor. We not only do not have the tools yet; we do not have sufficient toolmakers. And toolmakers cannot just be recruited out of the unemployment offices above the clouds of the WPA. This column has stated repeatedly for the last three years that there was in this country a definite shortage of skilled mechanics, due partly to the snobbish desire of parents to educate their children for oversupplied white-collar jobs, due partly to the opposition of the trade unions to a practical apprenticeship system, and due partly to the apathy of industry toward the same problem—a lack of foresight that there might suddenly be a sudden and necessary expansion in heavy industry.

There is, therefore, a point beyond which we cannot telescope time. A leading industrialist put it to me thus: "If Hitler were a hundred miles from our shores tomorrow morning, we could not speed up things beyond a certain point."

PRODIGIOUS ORDERS

In a talk before the National Association of Manufacturers Friday, Mr. Knudsen revealed that orders have been placed for a prodigious amount of material: 50,000 airplanes, 130,000 engines, 9,200 tanks, 300,000 machineguns were some of the figures he cited. As of January 1 we shall not even be turning out 1,000 planes a month as planned; we shall be turning out only 700, according to Mr. Knudsen. The whole program involves the expenditure of 18,000,000 man-hours of labor and constitutes "the greatest production problem of all time."

And the technical difficulties of performing this task speedily are considerable. Mr. Knudsen also made it clear that during the contracting and tooling-up period the defense program may as well be superimposed upon the normal economy, for to restrict it during this period would mean now a great many men out of work.

But there will certainly come a point, and speedily, when this issue will have to be faced. And I have the impression that the public is not being prepared to face it. Facing it means accepting the fact that this country cannot have the defense it needs and have everything else that it is accustomed to have.

Every single democracy has come to catastrophe or its verge on just this problem, which is summed up in the phrase "guns or butter." All of them, including the United States, have believed that they could have all the arms necessary and everything else as well.

CAN'T HAVE AS MUCH
The answer is—an answer hideously demonstrated during the last year—that you can't. This country can have butter, but it can't have anything like as many new cars, or new anything else that absorbs the special materials and the special labor needed for the manufacture of arms. This is not a pleasant idea. Defense in too many minds is just one of the most colossal of boondoggles, a way to create employment for millions of men, raise the national income by government expenditure, and get out of an economic jam—for a short time. It is not. Defense has to be paid for, and one way it is paid for is in the restriction of consumption.

The Germans have been licking the world, not because they are in alliance with any mysterious forces of history, but because they planned their war, and began preparing for it years and years before Hitler was anything more than a taproom agitator. It was back in the '20s that I went through the Junkers works in Dessau, and saw how even then the manufacturers were designing civilian airplanes along lines that would make it possible to turn them into warplanes from one moment to the next.

And since the advent of National Socialism, which is now seven years old, Germany has had a completely planned economy. In 1934, for instance, a friend of mine in Germany, remodeling her house under government loans somewhat like those of our FHA, was unable to put in a new bathroom, because the metals required for hot-water tanks, etc., were not released by the government. Other materials were, but not those.

POLITICAL FACTORS

The political and psychological factors are just as important as the technical. As long as a considerable number of more or less important persons are telling us that there isn't any danger, this country is not going to make sacrifices. While the country is asked to produce 50,000 airplanes and devote 18,000,000 man-hours to defense it is also asked to work on a program for feeding the civilian population, and, in fact, get ready to assist in the reconstruction of all Europe, presumably the reconstruction of Hitler's New Order. General Wood tells us that peace can be "negotiated" in the spring. If so, why arm?

One group tells us that we cannot afford to go on helping Britain (we haven't helped her at all yet, unless selling her things for cash at a very good profit indeed has become a definition of Christian charity and democratic solidarity), because we need the arms here for ourselves, and in the next breath we are warned that if Britain capitulates we shall be faced with the greatest menace in our whole history, and in the next that war will destroy democracy forever, and in the next that we shall be turned into an armed camp for years and years and that will destroy democracy, and in the next that the New Order is inevitable and we should be prepared to come to terms with it.

The real problem of this country is whether we make a defense effort, while keeping out of war, as united and energetic as though we were in war. If we can we are extremely unlikely to go to war or to be caught in a coalition where we can be pushed around.

Finer Charity.

There is an ancient book—I've forgotten the name and author—which describes the various types of giving. It concedes that all charity is good, but describes varying degrees of that goodness.

As I remember, the poorest kind of charity is that in which the giver insists on receiving praise for his giving and humble thanks from the recipient. Then it goes on in varying stages of improvement, to the finest of all.

That is the gift from the anonymous giver, unidentified even by the beneficiary of those gifts.

That is why I like so much those people who give to the annual Opportunities. Fund, quietly and anonymously.

Some years ago this column, realizing there must be many in Atlanta who would like this kind of giving best, suggested that any who wished might send their contributions to the Opportunities. Fund, "The Constitution," and that we might, thereby, raise sufficient to care for one Opportunity out of this special fund of the unknown givers. We did. Raised something like $250, if I remember correctly, through this channel.

Ever since then, every year, there have been a few good souls who have continued to send their dollars, five dollars, ten dollars or more, for the Opportunities, through Silhouettes. A little has come in this year already.

So, without making any high-powered campaign and without even trying to raise sufficient to care for an Opportunity family in full, it seemed wise to notify you all, this morning, that if you do want to share in this anonymous way of giving, why, Silhouettes is proud and delighted to receive your gifts and to pass them on to the Opportunity Family designated as unknown beneficiary of this column's collections.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Our old friend, Harold L. (for I loveable) Ickes has been sounding a note which no artist can harmonize with any chorus of national unity. Speaking at the deplorable non-union dinner of the nation and the new republic the other evening, Mr. Ickes proposed that "under proper safeguards," but without visas or diplomatic formalities, asylum be offered in the Virgin Islands for "men and women of intellectual achievement and democratic thought who are now in danger of the firing squad."

"My own department," he said, "is doing what lies within its power to open the way. We are urging the hospitable reception of all for whom there may be room and that they be allowed to stay in the Virgin Islands until they are otherwise provided for."

Mostly

Most of these refugees are Communists, anti-Fascist, although there are some Nazi and Fascist agents. But it stands to reason that a greater proportion of them will be Communists who fled over the border into France after the Spanish civil war and other Communists who, earlier in the general European revolution now in full eruption, escaped from Italy and Germany. France opened her doors to political pariahs of all varieties, and her hospitality was wickedly abused by a great horde of parasitic ingrates, but the Communists came to outnumber the others, and they certainly contributed to the fall of the nation.

The Communist, of whatever national origin, feels no gratitude to anyone and only contempt, in addition to his normal hatred, for any economically comfortable nation which is fool enough to save his life. The Spanish Loyalist cause was the Communists' cause regardless of whether it be agreed that they ran that side of the fight under direction from Moscow. And, although there doubtless are many among those refugees who are not Communists, it is almost impossible to discriminate in any mass rescue.

Again, it can easily be agreed that many of the refugees from Italy and Germany are not Communists, but still it is dangerous to take the individual's word. It is hard enough to identify undercover Communists here at home, for they will deny their principles for convenience, and their political faith permits them to do so.

Needs No

The danger of permitting a mass of refugees, inevitably including a heavy proportion of Communists, and, inevitably, some Nazi and Fascist spies and saboteurs, to settle in an outpost of the American Atlantic defense needs no detailed explanation. And certainly Mr. Ickes' notion of "proper safeguards" need not be accepted, at least until he explains just what he has in mind. It might be remembered that the safeguards which were considered proper in the case of Harry Bridges were not safe enough.

On this subject it should be observed that there is in progress in New York and Hollywood a campaign to import a lot of Europeans who are described as intellectuals and writers, and that some of these are the beneficiaries of a great ballyhoo, which disarms explanation. Americans are told that so-and-so is a great German or Spanish liberal and the author of some magnificent work, and they believe it without trying to ascertain whether the person in question is a Communist or without reading his book.

Suspicious

But at a recent dinner on behalf of this movement in Hollywood the committee in charge included most of the anti-American, native Communist film writers and fellow travelers, and the character of this sponsorship naturally creates suspicion. Communists are not interested in relieving distress. They are concerned only in importing reinforcements.

Does this propose, then, that refugees should be excluded for their political beliefs? But yes, of course. When this country was welcoming swarms of oppressed Europeans in the days of mass immigration, most of them joyously embraced American ideals. But in this case the nation is on notice that much of the refugee element is devoted to the task of destroying free government.

Mr. Ickes needs watching. He has great powers and is tricky, abusive, and high-handed, and here he seems to be shoving into matters which are the business of the Departments of State and Justice and involve the safety of the whole country.

There was France! make a peace with the Nazis under present world conditions. They reveal, in their illogic, a remarkable ignorance both on the German quality of the bully, on Nazi treachery and on British determination.

Twenty-five

Years Ago Today. From the news columns of Saturday, December 18, 1915: "New York, December 17.—Paul Koenig, formerly head of the secret service of the Hamburg-American line, and Richard Emil Lydencker were arrested tonight by agents of the Department of Justice, charged with conspiring to blow up the Welland canal."

And Fifty

Years Ago. From the news columns of Thursday, December 18, 1890: "The Cordele Cordelean has just celebrated its second anniversary and is in a prosperous condition, with a bright future before it."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

"THE LITTLE EAGLE COMES HOME" Somehow, no story I have read (and perhaps a dusty bone or so) of "L'Aiglon."

I could wish, too, that old Tom Watson were alive to write a special story about it. They intrigued him, Marie Louise, Napoleon, L'Aiglon, and all the other of that great era.

He did not greatly care for them. Especially did he dislike one of the group, Josephine, the corrupt and unfaithful young lady whom Napoleon called his "Sweet Love." (Later he called her other things.)

The Germans, inspired no doubt by Herr Hitler himself, took up the coffin of Napoleon's son, "The Little Eagle," and bore him back to Paris to rest beside his father in that great tomb in Les Invalides.

It was a gesture, so it was said, to cement the friendship between Germany and France, this bringing home of "L'Aiglon." But, somehow, it seems to me that it was a gesture by and for Herr Hitler himself. He went, one remembers, to that gilded tomb when Paris was taken, and had himself photographed there, peering at the tomb. (So many men, in armies and in business offices, have fancied they had within themselves some of the characteristic of a Napoleon.)

THE FAMOUS MARRIAGE It was because he wanted an heir and because the traditionally beautiful Josephine (Tom Watson said she had bad teeth) could not give him one, that Napoleon dismissed her.

He married Marie Louise, of Austria. It was a diplomatic move and had no more of love in it than did the marriage with Josephine. He married Josephine to obtain advancement in the army.

Marie Louise did give him a son. He was so happy he wrote Josephine about that son:

"My Love: I have received your letter. I thank you. My boy is big and very well. I hope that he will have good fortune. He has my chest, my mouth and my eyes. I hope that he will accomplish his destiny."

(So write the great to their cast-off wives.)

The boy was Napoleon Francois Joseph Charles.

Later he was King of Rome and sometimes he was called Napoleon II.

Those were the great days. It is but 125 years since the Battle of Waterloo, and the close of the Napoleonic period in the world's history.

The boy had his father's chest. For the father the bitterness of defeat was to eat out his heart on lonely St. Helena.

Within the boy's chest another destiny was to go to work. This was the destiny of the tubercle bacillus. He was to know some fame. When his father abdicated in favor of the boy, the young eagle was three years old. His mother fled with him to Vienna.

When Napoleon escaped from Elba and came back to shake the world and almost regain his empire, there were efforts to kidnap the young eagle and bring him back. They failed.

He lived to be 21, dying there in Vienna of tuberculosis.

It is his dust which they have brought back to lie in state in the church at Les Invalides and then to rest beside the dust of his father.

Such is, at least, a part of the destiny.

"SON OF THE DEVIL"

Idea does not greatly change. The English cartoonists, used to draw his likeness in a picture frame, and then draw the devil, pointing to him with pride. The devil was saying:

"This is MY only begotten son in whom I am well pleased."

Present-day cartoonists haven't done so well with Hitler.

When he was 43 years old (Hitler is 51) his empire included 100,000,000 persons. It stretched from Holland to the Ionic isles; from Danzig to the tip of Italy.

A year and a half after his domain reached that expanded area his total empire was the small island of Elba.

He left many reforms, even if 1,700,000 Frenchmen were killed following him, and even though 2,000,000 soldiers of other lands were to fall opposing him.

It is one of the great stories. He was a greasy-haired captain of artillery that day, near the church of St. Roche, when he gave the order to fire the cannons. He blew out the revolution with those cannons and went on to become the greatest emperor of the ages.

The story of Hitler is a great story. He has not yet expanded his empire as far Napoleon's, but his alliances and fear of his power give him dominion and influence over an area far greater than that ever achieved by the Corsican.

And there are no "little eagles" in the Hitler story. There are just petty, grating, jailers to manage Norway and Poland and other conquered lands. There are no Josephines and no Marie Louises. And no sons.

Well, one may wonder what it will be another 100 years from now!

The Story of a Veteran Who Was Discharged Some Years Too Late

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Twenty-three years ago, when Americans decided to make the world safe for democracy, a certain man named Bill felt the call of duty and enlisted to do his part. He was near the age limit, but sound and fit.

His martial adventures were limited, for soon after reaching the front he forgot his mask in the excitement of battle and inhaled a breath of poison gas. It wasn't enough to kill him, but it shredded lung tissue like white-hot knives and sent him to a base hospital to finish the war.

Nobody knows when he got T. B. It may have happened in France, for the bugs were plentiful there and lungs broken down by gas had no defense against them. Wherever and whenever it began, the gas was the primary cause and there never was any argument about that.

When the war was over and the government had made arrangements to care for casualties, Bill was sent to a fine sanitarium and given the best of care. A few years later, when he was able to get around, he moved to a hotel.

On the government's records he was classified as wholly and permanently disabled and therefore received the maximum pension, which enabled him to live in comfort.

He recovered slowly. One day he would seem well, and the next, while bending over a wash bowl or sitting in some friend's car watching the people on the street, he would have another hemorrhage and go back to the sanitarium—lying on a stretcher eating ice.

Thus the years passed, in alternate anxiety and despair and boredom, and at last the fight was won.

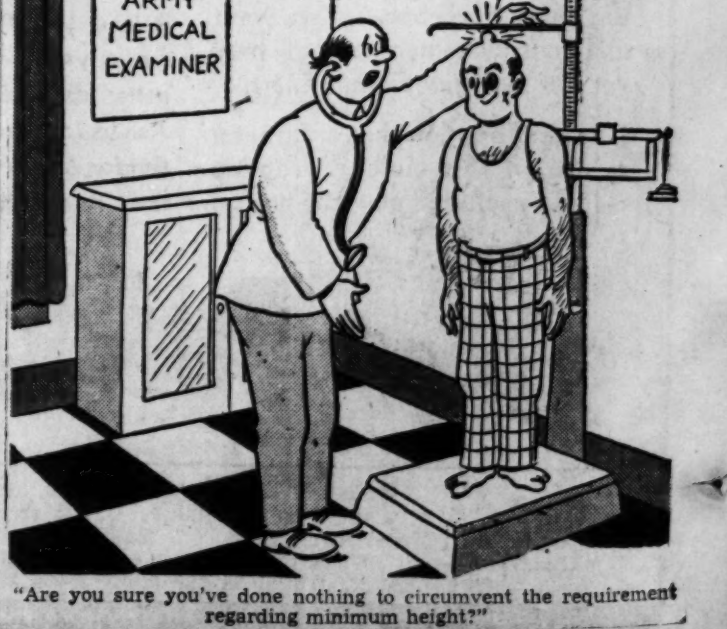

Bill is now an "arrested case," and the government has notified him that his pension will stop.

Unfortunately, his need of food and clothing and shelter is not "arrested," and he is now 57 years old. The war, from first to last, took almost 25 years of his life.

It might as well take the rest, for where can a man of 57 get a job? Who wants an employee who will collapse if he doesn't spend most of his time resting?

The story has no moral. But while the government is dishing out billions to the deserving and undeserving, it is only fair to record its economies.

An Open Letter To Harold Martin Of Our Staff

Dear Harold: About dogs! I'm getting damn sore.

When I bestowed upon you one of my twin dachshunds it was with the distinct understanding—oral, I'll admit, and not in writing—that he was for use as a household pet and not for Sunday column copy.

And how have you requited my generosity? Think this matter over, quietly and at length. You have bitten the hand that fed you—or gave you a dog which will bite the hand that feeds him, unless your ankle is within more convenient reach.

Mr. Martin, you are a scoundrel. You are a thief-in-the-night—if you write at night. You are so low down you should be dodging through back alleys lest you should come face-to-face with honest men. In other words, you are an ingrate unfit to emerge from under your flat rock in the daytime. And if you didn't weigh about 60 pounds more than I do, I'd ask you to come about behind the barn—if we could find a barn—and settle this just between ourselves. I'd do it anyway, except I'm not feeling so well today.

Column Rights Reserved

It was distinctly stipulated, Mr. Martin, that dogs belong to me. That is, my dogs. I yield the right to Ruth Stanton Cogill, dog editor, to discuss cocker spaniels and chows and such trivial topics and I offer no protest against the entire sports department writing about bird dogs and fox hounds.

But dachshunds—specifically my dachshunds—are copyrighted. Take them away and leave me with nothing in sight for a column and where am I? Othello with his occupation gone.

Besides that—and here's where I'm getting really sore—your peurile article in last Sunday's paper reflected on my rearing of pups.

I owned two pups. Ding and Dong. Identical twins. Both as sweet as a young girl at her first communion, both intelligent, the cynosure of all eyes and the envy of the North Side.

For economical reasons not unconnected with the cost of dog food I offered you one. If you remember, you came for him after dark. Neither of us could distinguish Ding from Dong. It developed next day, in the sunlight, you had taken Dong.

And now you devote an overextended column to describing his fiendish ways. How he chewed the leg off a piano. I don't believe that. I don't believe you own a piano. If you did, you couldn't play it. And you committed another prevarication. About your friend chasing Dong 200 yards with a broom. Nobody could chase Ding or Dong or their mother, the Jeep, with a broom or a horse-whip. My dachshunds are not chased—and I hope the printer spells that right. They'd fight a raging lion or a couple of tigers before they'd yield an inch.

Two alternatives present themselves, Mr. Martin. You are a direct descendant of Ananias or you've permitted my former pup, Dong, son of the Jeep, to adopt your own objectionable ways, such as chewing up furniture and demolishing the neighbors' household effects.

Well, you've got him, you've ruined him and you can keep him. But lay off writing about him. How do you expect me to earn a living? This is positively the final warning.

That Trocadero

At least one person remembers the Trocadero theater in Atlanta in that old exposition year—to which I referred a day or two ago.

She is Mrs. Grace D. Hussey, of Blue Ridge avenue. She says she was a small girl from the country then. And the Trocadero stood on the site of the present Western Union building—where she is an employee.

"I remember the dance," she writes, "where colored lights were thrown on the dancers and the stage had a mirror floor. Carmen-setta (I think that is correct) danced with yards and yards of veiling, long poles and, it seemed, thousands of colored lights."

I missed the dance. But the star's name probably was Carmencita. And the dance was the familiar "Flame Dance," considered the super-duper in those days. It's still seen in some of the musical shows. Not much of a dance, at that! Just a thousand yards of white stuff, the dancer's arms extended by wands, or sticks, or poles. And she whirls around and waves the fabric and the lights change it from green to gold and crimson and blue.

Like the new fountain in Joel Hurt park. I saw it lighted for the first time a few evenings ago. Really, it's worth a special trip downtown.

PRIVATE EMPLOYMENT NOT OPEN FOR ALL

Editor Constitution: Practically everyone will applaud the editorial in your issue of December 14 entitled "All Must Work." However, you will realize in recalling your own words, that there are still "thousands of other unemployed men who should be given the work training available through WJA."

Certainly those still unemployed would gladly accept vacancies in private employment if they were available. Moreover, their very presence is an indication of the reluctance of WPA workers generally to give up their permanent jobs for temporary ones in private employment, the termination of which means their inclusion in the ranks of unemployed until another vacancy on WPA permits them to be restored. Meanwhile, their families suffer.

If positions are open where WPA workers would not be "victimized" nor "forced to accept unfair conditions, certainly they should be left to their own resources" if they refuse to accept such work. While it is true that isolated instances exist where WPA workers are selfishly willing to subject their families to low standards of living through refusal to accept private employment, the vast majority of such workers, if assured of permanent employment, would gladly accept "when conditions are fair" and the work permanent. ARMAND WYLE.

STILL READS EDITORIAL WRITTEN MONTHS AGO.

Editor Constitution: Though this appreciation is somewhat late, it is nevertheless sincere.

Early this fall one of our Ontario papers reprinted your editorial, "Twelve O'Clock and All's Well." So much did it appeal to me in both its spirit and its composition, that I saved it and have since shared it with dozens of friends.

Such an understanding reference to the spirit being shown by our common motherland is a reminder that we are sprung from the same breed, that we share the same ideals. Editorials such as yours could go a long way in fostering the unity in the English-speaking world, which our statesmen are striving to create.

Please accept my congratulations and my thanks for an article which I am still rereading. (MISS) G. MCCOLE.

Good Morning

BY LOUIE D. NEWTON.

I want somebody to tell me where we are at in this country. Has it come to pass that one James C. Petrillo can tell the Department of War that a band composed of enlisted soldiers in good standing, cannot play "The Star-Spangled Banner" in an army camp to be broadcast over radio unless and until every member of that band pays his dues to Petrillo's organization? I notice that Petrillo suggests to our secretary of the War Department that it might be a sensible thing to talk with him "and make a deal."

I repeat, I want somebody to tell me where we are at in this country. I thought we were in an emergency—that democracy was face to face with a crucial struggle with a coalition of totalitarian powers. I thought that it was generally agreed that we were in a serious situation. Evidently the President shares that feeling, judging from his remark at Warm Springs last Sunday that he "would return to Warm Springs in March if the world survives."

And yet this man Petrillo denies the United States army the privilege of playing "The Star-Spangled Banner" or any other music to be heard by our people in patriotic programs from Fort Dix, N. J., except upon conditions which he will impose. I judge that we are to understand that he will impose the same conditions upon army and navy bands in other military establishments. And at the time of this writing (Monday afternoon) no word of protest has been heard from the President, or any other governmental executive.

If Mr. Petrillo can dictate to the United States Army, what is to keep him or someone else from assuming the same dictatorial attitude in any department of the government? If Mr. Petrillo can get away with the demand that members of the United States Army Band must pay dues to his organization before they can play in patriotic programs over the radio, could not some other individual demand that soldiers pay him or his organization dues before they could shoulder a rifle or fall in line for march? Where does this thing lead to?

I could go on to call attention to many ominous evidences of dictatorial assumption throughout the country which interpreted widely as slowing down to walk the whole national defense program, but the reader is as familiar as I am with these published facts.

What I want to know is, what are we going to do about it? What can we do about it? I repeat, I thought that every citizen of the country was expected to throw himself into this emergency without reservation, whether it be his money, his skill, his time, his sympathy, his all. I may be just plain dumb, as I usually am, but I wish somebody would say something—better than that, I wish somebody who has the authority would do something.

Irony," in the second column of today's issue?

In the last paragraph of this editorial, I quote: "And it would not be difficult to name several in regard to Americans' attitude toward the war and the world, either."

Why not take the gloves off and name those in America with the hope that, perhaps, it would arouse more Americans to the danger that threatens us, which has already overtaken our former ally, France? BELTON C. PLOWDEN.

Britain Nears Crisis, Speed Aid, Hull Says

Secretary Makes Personal Appeal to Defense Board.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(P)—Predictions by American and British officials that the next three or four months would bring a crucial phase of the war spurred an intensive government drive tonight for greater speed in war supply production and more help in solving Britain's sea transport problem.

Secretary of State Hull, armed with confidential data on Britain's needs and the possibilities of a new German attempt to knock out the British Isles, disclosed that he had taken a personal hand in urging defense commissioners and other officials to the utmost effort in speeding up American aid.

Hull Forecasts Crisis.

Secretary Hull spoke in broad, general terms in telling reporters how he had personally intervened for a production speed-up. From other authoritative sources, however, it was learned that he had told defense commissioners and other officials that Britain probably would face a serious crisis next spring and that it was imperative that present delivery schedules of American war supplies be increased immediately.

Britain's need for additional merchant ships in which to transport American war supplies also was said to be receiving Hull's personal attention and that of other officials. They were said to be examining all possibilities for making still more merchant vessels available to Britain.

Although convoy protection for supply ships was held in some quarters to be of equal importance, there appeared to be no widespread support within the administration for the United States to supply naval forces for this task.

More Destroyers Possible.

Not ruled out, however, was the possibility that more destroyers such as the 50 transferred to Britain last summer might be released.

Meanwhile contracts were let for 40 more destroyers than the Navy originally contemplated for its two-ocean fleet, Secretary Knox announced, swelling the total of such vessels planned to 365. The contracts totaled $261,684,875.

Although no mention of further aid to Britain was made in Knox's announcement, it was recalled that the British repeatedly have stressed their need for more destroyers in recent discussions of aid from the United States. Such vessels needed by the British to convoy merchant ships carrying food and munitions range from 50 to 400.

Secretary Hull laid stress on what he termed American interests in discussing his own efforts to give increased momentum to the arms production drive.

He declined to confirm a report that he had sent word to the National Association of Manufacturers that Britain could not hold out more than 90 days unless additional American aid was forthcoming immediately.

Navy Awards Contracts. Another development during the day was the awarding by the Navy of two contracts totaling $36,250,455 for airplanes and spare parts. The Navy did not specify the number of planes involved nor delivery dates.

The War Department authorized immediate expansion of the facilities of three companies for the production of machine tools and announced that similar additional authorizations would be disclosed later.

Acting to spread the manufacture of machine tools, which William S. Knudsen has declared are "desperately needed" to build airplanes, torpedo boat destroyers and other weapons, the department issued "letters of intent" authorizing expansion by the following companies:

Giddings and Lewis, Fond Du Lac, Wis.; Bullard Machine Company, Bridgeport, Conn.; and Bryant Chucking Grinder Company, Springfield, Vt.

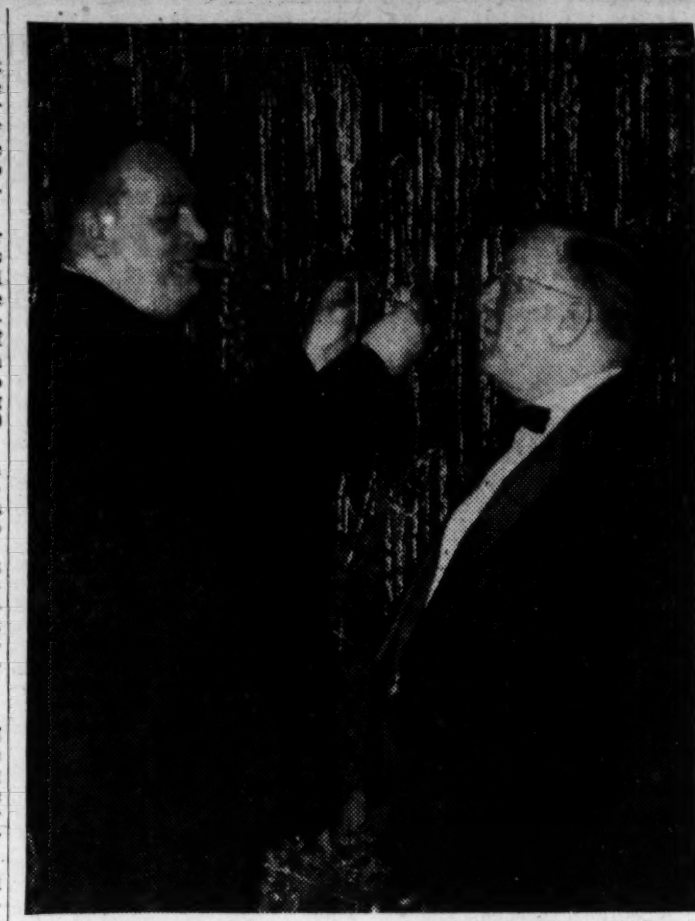

Under the terms of these letters of intent, these concerns will finance the expansion themselves, to be repaid by the government over a five-year period.

Britain Again Tells U. S. She Can't Pay on Debt

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(P)—The State Department today made public a note from the British government saying it could not pay the war debt installment totaling $127,670,765.05 due December 15.

The note, signed by Neville Butler, the British charge d'affaires, once more reiterated, however, that the British government "will be willing to reopen discussions on the subject whenever circumstances are such as to warrant the hope that a satisfactory result might be reached."

F. D. R. Favors 'Leasing' War Aid to Britain

and help put out the fire. He would not say first the hose cost $15 and he wanted payment for it.

If, after the fire was out, the hose was still in good shape, it would be returned with thanks. But if it were smashed or received holes in it during the fire, the President continued, the neighbor would be reminded that it could not be used and would offer to replace it.

Whether title to planes, guns and ships which might be sent to Britain under the contemplated program would remain with this country or be vested with the British, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, is a legalistic problem.

He indicated that was a detail and merely incidental to the main desire to assure Britain of a continuation of the flow of American goods for conducting war across the Atlantic.

The whole matter would be handled the President made it clear, on the basis that it is necessary to assist the British in their country.

On the question of speeding up domestic production of arms, Mr. Roosevelt said that British orders were a good means of obtaining the necessary expansion.

He said that there had been no need indicated yet for the government to exercise its authority to take over plants which are falling behind on production, but that two or three cases were being watched.

While legislation will be necessary, and perhaps several different measures, along with appropriations, the President said that the latest phase of the program to give England all aid short of war did not involve amendment or repeal of the neutrality act.

Best Defense for U. S.

In the present world situation, Mr. Roosevelt said, there is, of course, absolutely no doubt in the minds of an overwhelming number of Americans that the best immediate defense of the United States is the assurance of success of Great Britain in defending herself.

Declaring he had read a lot of nonsense recently about such things as financial aid to the British, the chief executive said that within the memory of history, no major war ever had been won or lost through a lack of money.

He declared that stories and speeches had been going back to the idea that money in the bank was necessary to win this particular war.

There are many ways of doing the same thing, the President asserted, but some people are using a banal type of thinking on the method.

Builds U. S. Defense Facilities.

Elaborating on the value of British orders, Mr. Roosevelt said that additional production facilities were one thing necessary for American defense and that the more we have these facilities, such as factories, munitions plants and shipbuilding capacity, the stronger American defense is.

Therefore, he declared, orders from Britain are a tremendous asset because they result in creating additional facilities.

There are several ways of encouraging the development of these facilities, the President said, asserting that it is the narrow-minded fellow who has been assuming that the only way was to repeal statutes like the neutrality and Johnson acts and then lend Britain money to spend in this country.

One banal type of mind holds that view, he said, while another believes that there should be outright gifts.

Might Refuse Gifts.

While declaring that we might come to the point of outright gifts, though he did not know, Mr. Roosevelt said that he was not at all sure they were necessary or that Britain would want them.

The new plan that has been developed, he said, has been under exploration for three or four weeks, and is one of several that might possibly be devised.

It is possible, he suggested, for the United States to take over British orders and, because they are essentially for the same kind of munitions as we use, convert them into American orders.

We have enough money for that, he said.

Then when military events or other conditions determined it to be proper, the President continued, these orders could go across the Atlantic, either under lease or sold subject to mortgages.

Arrangement for Future.

He expressed the view that Britain was well able to pay for orders already given in this country, and that the new arrangement need apply only to future contracts.

Asked whether this country might take the war supplies abroad and deliver them to Britain, the President said it would be unnecessary to ship them in vessels flying American flags, manned by American seamen, and carrying American passengers.

The war materials, he said, might even be sent under a Bolivian flag.

In mentioning ships in this connection, the President said he did not have in mind naval vessels but merely merchant ships.

Asked whether the United States would carry the goods across the Atlantic, the President said it was only a detail as to what flag the transporting ships flew, thus indicating that he had in mind transferring the ships to the British.

As for speeding up production in plants now having defense orders by operating seven days a week instead of five, the President indicated that was a problem which could be solved by management.

Skilled Workers Needed.

Of course, some plants cannot operate an entire week without closing down entirely or shutting down a part of the plant for maintenance or repairs, he asserted. In some plants, he added, there are not enough skilled workmen to maintain a seven-day week of around-the-clock operations without working them overtime and paying overtime wages.

But efforts are being made to solve the problem of the skilled worker shortage by training men, Mr. Roosevelt said.

There is no reason, he indicated, why common labor could not be utilized in such a way as to make operation possible seven days a week. He said that one group could be employed the first five days of a week, another group would start work a day later, and so on, so that continuous forces would be on hand.

In the basic problem of helping Britain and vitalizing defense production, Mr. Roosevelt said that the question of appointing a chairman for the defense commission was only a detail.

Shell Factories Cited.

At one point, he said that if present shell factories, for example, were filled up with orders and the British wanted a new one built, the United States might take over the British order for shells and finance the plant. That, he said, would build up the production capacity for shells.

On the question of speeding up production, the President said he thought that authority already existed to compel plants to operate two or three shifts of men.

On Capitol Hill, there was little immediate comment on the President's plan. Senator Downey, Democrat, California, said the proposal was "novel and interesting but I want to study it." Senator Johnson, Democrat, Colorado, said "I want to think this through before I comment on it."

TOO MUCH TO ASK.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 17.—(P)—Postmaster Ben E. Lester believes in service, but the Christmas rush was too much. He issued an appeal to rural patrons to purchase stamps and do their own licking "during this, our busiest week," instead of putting money in their mail boxes for the rural carrier.

Capitol Santa To Tote Million For Teachers

Promised Pay in Full for First Four Months of School Year.

Georgia school teachers will be paid in full for the first four months of the school year by January 10, school officials said yesterday.

The teachers, whose total monthly salaries run about $1,500,000, will receive $1,000,000 before Christmas, leaving only $500,000 to be paid by January 10 from ad valorem tax payments.

Checks were mailed out yesterday for $178,576.27. This brought the total payments to teachers and administrative authorities to $4,558,634.12 since the schools opened in September.

Edmund Lowe Earned Million, Wife Charges

Actor's Estranged Mate Seeks $2,000 Month Pending Trial.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 17.—(AP)—A suit for temporary alimony filed by Rita Lowe, estranged wife of Screen Actor Edmund Lowe, lists his earnings in the last four years as $1,009,140.71.

That figure was contained in an audit submitted in Mrs. Lowe's petition for $2,000 a month temporary alimony pending trial of their contested divorce suit.

Mrs. Lowe, appearing before Judge Walter S. Gates today, testified that at the time of her marriage to the actor in Armont, N. Y., April 2, 1936, she had an income of $1,400 monthly. That was the amount, she said, her former husband, Albert Kaufman, movie producer, paid for her support and that of their son, Albert Jr., now 16.

"I am $2,000 in debt now," she testified. "When Mr. Lowe and I separated it was agreed he would pay all the expenses of my house and give me $100 a week additional. I am trying to maintain a 15-room house with two servants on no income at all."

Canadian Official Saved From Torpedoed Liner

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—It was stated authoritatively tonight that Charles D. Howe, Canadian minister of munitions, who was aboard the liner Western Prince when she was torpedoed west of Ireland Saturday, had arrived safely at a British port.

The Canadians were among 60 passengers aboard the 10,926-ton liner.

(Mrs. George Warwick Boxall, of Wilton, Conn., received a cablegram today from her sister in London that all passengers aboard the Western Prince had been saved.)

Swiss To File Protest Against British Bombing

BERN, Switzerland, Dec. 17.—(AP)—The Swiss legation in London was instructed tonight to protest against the bombing of Basel last night by British fliers.

A demand for full reparations and for measures to prevent a repetition was included in the instructions which followed an examination and identification of the bomb fragments as British today.

U. S. Confused On Defenses, Marshall Says

General Declares Country at Critical Point in Great Transition.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—General George C. Marshall, chief of the Army's general staff, said tonight that the United States was in many ways "at the critical point in a great transition from a condition of more or less complete unpreparedness to one of tremendous military power."

In an address prepared for delivery at a dinner of the National Aeronautic Association, celebrating Pan-American Aviation Day, Marshall said the country was confused by statistics and by "unrestrained and public debates" over each difficulty or delay.

"Every move that we make is subjected to the closest scrutiny," he declared, "and every error, real or imaginary, is pounced upon and exploited to the world. This welter of conflicting information has so confused the public mind that few realize either how much has been done, or how much remains to be done."

Italians Regain Palermo After Counterdrive

Greeks Declare Broad Gulf Is Under Heavy Shellfire.

ATHENS, Wednesday, Dec. 18. (UP)—The official Greek spokesman early today intimated that reorganized Italian forces, in a strong counter-assault along the Albanian coast, have recaptured the port of Palermo from Greek troops who took it five days ago.

The spokesman said that the port, five miles south of Khimara along the main coastal road to Valona, was not in Greek hands "now" although Greek artillery "again" has the broad Gulf of Palermo under heavy shellfire.

The official spokesman admitted strong Italian resistance in the coastal sector, one prong of a double-barreled Greek drive upon the seaport of Valona.

The Greek capture of Porto Palermo was announced by the official government spokesman last Friday.

An official Greek war communique last night told of a strong Greek advance upon the key highway town of Klisura, 27 miles southeast of Valona, which was said to be on fire as a result of Greek shelling.

Official reports said Greek attacks had driven Italian troops from Tepelini, 10 miles west of Klisura on the same important military highway northward to Berat and mid-Albania, but Italian artillery on heights outside the town is impeding the Greek push along the Drinos valley.

U. S. To Transfer Nazis To Unused CCC Camp

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—The government, it was learned today, has directed that some 300 Nazi sailors from the scuttled German liner "Columbus" be transferred from Angel island in San Francisco bay to an abandoned CCC camp near Fort Stanton, New Mexico.

The sailors were rescued by an American destroyer several months ago after scuttling their ship to avoid capture by a British man-of-war. The incident occurred off the Atlantic seaboard and the survivors were taken temporarily to Ellis island.

West End Civitan Club Holds Yule Program

A Christmas program featured the meeting of the West End Civitan Club last night at the clubroom, 1115 Gordon street. Musical selections were furnished by the Glee Club and band of the Joe Brown Junior High school.

Dr. G. W. Gasque, former rector of the Episcopal Church of the Incarnation, was guest speaker.

'Can't Hold 'Em Back,' Officer Complains of Australian Troops

By EDWARD KENNEDY.
WITH THE BRITISH FORCES IN LIBYA, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Fresh Australian troops, chafing to get into battle with the Italians, pressed on toward the Libyan base of Bardia today at such a pace that one of their commanders complained: "We can't hold them back."

The Australians form a unit with the British command which followed up the occupation of Salum, Egypt, by hurrying up reinforcements for the advance on Bardia, 15 miles inside the border of Italian Libya.

"They want to show they can do what their fathers did in the last war," said the Australians' chief.

Straight From Camp. Completely mechanized, the men from "Down Under" moved directly from camp to the battlefront.

The mechanized units already were operating through the Libyan desert west of Bardia, while others were active to the south, and new infantrymen pushed toward Bardia from the east, in apparent encircling move against the Italian stronghold.

The Australian vanguard overnight tackled one Italian column, capturing transports and guns.

Italians Leave Fast.

Most of the Italians already had left in the direction of Bardia so swiftly that they could not be intercepted. The mop-up squads at Salum found 15 Italian planes on the ground so badly damaged by British bombs that the Fascists had not tried to salvage them.

The Italians abandoned lower Salum Sunday morning, dynamiting the hairpin-curved road which leads to the upper town.

Sunday night the RAF struck at both upper Salum and Bardia with a series of terrific raids which I watched from a promontory along the coast.

Fire Lights Sky.

One squadron after another of British planes swooped to the attack and I saw resultant explosions and fires as their bombs hit the targets.

Italian antiaircraft fire also lit the sky, interspersed with occasional "flaming onions"—great rainbow-hued, fiery projectiles, eight of them chained together and ascending slowly, snaking in the wind.

This weapon, of German origin, is designed to tangle about the planes, but so far none in this sector has been brought down by it.

The planes in their turn cast out parachute flares which gleamed over the desert and sea like great guiding stars.

I saw two planes crash down in flames.

British mastery of the air was so overwhelming that there was scarcely a moment of the day or night when a British plane could not be seen or heard, while I saw only three Italian craft in the same 24-hour period.

On Saturday night, Italian fliers attempted to destroy a big water supply they had established at Buq Buq, despite the fact that thousands of Italian prisoners were camped next to it. They missed both water and prisoners by about the same margin—50 years.

The roundup of stray Italian soldiers continues, in many cases at their own request.

Asks for Arrest.

As a party of newspaper correspondents was breaking camp where we had spent the night outside Buq Buq, three Libyans, one with an eye shot out, appeared and asked us for three things: Bread, water and to be taken prisoner.

Three correspondents attached to the Australian forces armed with one unloaded rifle soon rounded up and delivered to the military 20 prisoners.

In the past day or two I have seen thousands of Italian prisoners marching to Sidi Barrani along a Roman road they themselves built and named Via Vittoria—Victory Way.

March to Prison.

These Italians had hoped to march into the valley of the Nile and on to Suez. Instead, the British are using the broad Italian road in their drive against Bardia while the Italians under British guard are using it to head for prison ships bound for internment camps.

Any temptation to escape is discouraged by the terrain; off the road lies the trackless desert on one side and the sea on the other. Few guards are necessary.

Danube Shipping Halted By Ice; Blow to Nazis

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Dec. 17. (AP)—Shipping on the Danube river, Germany's lifeline to Rumanian oil and Balkan foodstuffs, was ordered halted today because of ice conditions.

Because of erratic and inadequate rail connections out of Rumania, the Danube is the key route for oil transport.

Atlanta Man Killed When Hit by Truck

Month's Second Fatality Brings Year's Traffic Toll to 35.

William McCutcheon, elderly retired watchmaker, of 27 Fourth street, N. E., was killed late yesterday afternoon when struck by a highway freight truck while crossing West Peachtree street, near the intersection of Third street. His death was the second traffic fatality of the month and brought the total for this year to 35, eight more than the figure for the corresponding time of last year. Total fatalities for last year were only 28.

Police listed the driver of the truck as C. L. Wood, of 754 Lee street. He was booked on a charge of reckless driving—accident. The owner of the vehicle was listed as the Great Southern Trucking Company, of Atlanta.

Funeral arrangements for the victim will be announced by Henry M. Blanchard Funeral Home.

Plate glass was first made as a rolled product in 1688, in France.

Work Started On $100,000 Trade Center

Peachtree-Brighton Road Structure To Be Ready by March.

An important new development of the shopping-center motif in commercial building in Atlanta was announced yesterday by Realty Operations, Inc., which has begun work on the more than $100,000 project at Peachtree road and Brighton road.

Combined in the one location will be a large Lane drugstore and an A&P super-grocery store of a new drive-in design and abundant parking space in front and on both sides.

The structure will front nearly 100 feet on Peachtree road and extend 100 feet or more on Brighton road. It will be identified as Nos. 1941 and 1943 Peachtree.

Lease for the building has been taken for 10 years. The new shopping-center design is described as an expression of the most modern thinking in commercial architecture and arrangement planning, providing a maximum of facility for patrons.

The drugstore will have more than 4,000 feet of selling space, while the grocery will occupy an even larger area. Work is to be expedited to put the stores in operation by March 1.

Realty Operations, Inc., is a Massell corporation.

Axis Weapons 'Propaganda, Sabotage' Ickes

Secretary of Interior Calls 'Lindbergh Peri- patetic Appeaser'

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Secretary of the Interior Ickes charged tonight that the Axis plans to cripple the United States by sabotage, to sap it by propaganda and to drive a wedge of suspicion between this country and Latin America.

In a speech prepared for the Columbia University Institute of Arts and Science, Ickes also denounced Americans whom he described as appeasers. Among them he named Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, whom he called a "peripatetic appeaser, who would abjectly surrender his sword even before it is demanded."

Last September, Ickes said, "the Nazis in Los Angeles, at their meeting in the Deutsches Haus, offered their nomination for the presidency of the United States to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh. 'Of course, I do not say that the colonel accepted or even was consulted about this precious gift. I am merely stating a significant fact. After all, Lindbergh has been the proud possessor of a Hitler decoration for several years and his recent utterances, both at home and abroad, have not been of a tone that would persuade Nazi sympathizers in this country that he would not be susceptible to the flattery of a 'nomination' for President at their hands, however absurd such a gesture might be in the eyes of patriotic Americans."

Copeland, CAA Aide, Named Air Captain

New Camp Gordon Air- port Plans To Be Sub- mitted Today.

Richard Coulter Copeland, manager of the Civil Aeronautics Authority's southeastern region, yesterday was commissioned a captain in the 128th Observation Squadron, Georgia National Guard, by Governor Rivers.

Simultaneously, it was announced that architect's plans for the squadron's hangar at the new Camp Gordon airport would be completed and submitted for approval today. Pending completion of the facilities at the new airport, the state has contracted with H. W. (Pete) Clay for storage space for the five National Guard planes at the municipal airport.

With completion of temporary ground arrangements, Major George Finch, commander of the squadron, has asked Washington for immediate delivery of the planes. Copeland, a veteran of 6,050 hours in the air, including 3,500 in scheduled air transports, is in charge of CAA activities in Georgia, the Carolinas, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi and Tennessee.

Included among his duties is the civilian pilot training course, turning out approximately 2,000 pilots each four months. During his career he has seen air service in China and South America and has also been trained in celestial navigation. He has long been active in government aeronautical work.

Clearing Skies Cheer Up East And Midwest

On-Shore Winds Lash Into Oregon, Washing- ton, California.

By The Associated Press.

Clearing skies cheered the Great Lakes region and the eastern seaboard of the United States last night as the storm which brought two days of snow, sleet and rain moved northeastward into the Atlantic.

On the west coast, however, on-shore winds drove another storm into Oregon, Washington and California, and spread unsettled weather into Colorado, New Mexico and the western portion of Texas.

Snow fell in the mountains, and the ridge route between Los Angeles and San Francisco continued to be all but impassable.

The tail-end of the eastern storm whipped Maine in a parting blast, and Portland reported snowflakes as big as half-dollars in the wake of cold and rain and ice-coated highways and sidewalks.

The hazardous weather caused the Boston and Maine Airways to cancel its Tuesday afternoon schedule.

In the south the weather was clear from Texas eastward through the Gulf states and the Carolinas, but low temperatures were forecast in most places, with freezing weather as far south as Columbus, Georgia.

A 35-mile-an-hour wind swept the Philadelphia area, uprooting trees, shattering windows, tearing down wires and injuring at least two persons.

As the wind abated, weather observers predicted a drop of nearly 10 degrees in temperature last night after a moderate 42 degrees above most of the day.

Flogging Witness Warned in Note

The band of night-riding terrorists who spread fear through south Fulton county for three years from 1937 to 1939 by flogging more than 50 persons must be going soft, a veteran county law enforcement officer remarked yesterday.

His remark followed the finding of a crude note pinned to the front door of the home of D. M. Harper, whose testimony recently aided in the conviction of George Cameron, an East Point Klansman, on charges of flogging two persons—one of whom was Harper.

The note, printed on ruled paper and unsigned, was contained in an envelope addressed to "D. M." It read: "We mean for you to move out of East Point." The message was turned over to Solicitor General John A. Boykin.

Christmas Decorations Installed at City Hall

Christmas was just around the corner and the Yuletide spirit was in its ascendancy at the city hall yesterday.

Chimes played carols from atop the tower of the 14-story city hall building, a six-foot star with red, white and blue lights shone from the same tower last night, and a fir tree with electric decorations was installed in the first-floor corridor by L. Glenn Dewberry, superintendent of the building.

BRIDGE AUTHORIZED.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Legislation to legalize construction of a free highway bridge across the Willacoochee river, between Valdosta, Ga., and Madison, Fla., at Horns ferry was signed today by President Roosevelt.

The bridge would be built by the Georgia Highway Board.

License Bureau To Close on 24th

The "do your Christmas shopping early" warning has spread to Fulton county's marriage license bureau.

So persons who are planning to wed on Christmas Day better heed the advice, for the marriage license bureau will be closed all day Tuesday, the day before Christmas, the county ordinary said yesterday.

Office of the superior court clerk will also be closed all day Tuesday, while other county departments will stop Christmas activities at noon Tuesday. Courts will recess Friday afternoon and remain closed until January 6.

Making Tags For Autos Is Big Industry

Plant at Tattall Produces 5,000 Sets Each Day.

By LUKE GREENE.

Come January 1 more than 400,000 automobile owners in Georgia will be confronted with the problem of purchasing their license plates for 1941.

It is always a task postponed until the last minute. Every year there is a warning that car owners should not wait until the deadline to buy their tags. Yet they wait, and as a result they have to fret and fume for hours in long lines that sometimes reach outside the capitol door.

But it is most important that you have those little numerals on the front and rear of your automobile. The average sheriff or cop usually gets very upset when he sees a car without them.

Made At Tattall.

Where do they come from, these adornments that help to keep you out of the jug? You go to the capitol and buy them, but did you ever stop to think how they got to the statehouse in the first place?

Well, to begin with, Georgia license plates are manufactured at Tattall's plant. The tag plant there is run day and night and 500 sets are turned out each 24 hours. Since last July 25,000 sets have been pouring from the machines each week.

Soon Will Be Over.

The 1941 run soon will be over. Already 520,000 sets have been packed into cartons, ready to be placed on your car.

Tag manufacturing in Georgia is a $200,000 a year industry. The plant occupies a floor space of 20,000 square feet. In addition to providing vocational training for some 120 inmates, it also saves the state many thousands of dollars.

How It Is Made.

Now comes the question of how the tag is actually made. If the rest of this story had a title, it might be "A Tag Is Born."

If you were going through the plant you would first be confronted with a large piece of metal, 14 by 78 inches. From this the "tag-to-be," 14 by 6 1/2 inches, is cut. Six sets are cut from each sheet of metal.

You travel along with the embryo tag to the punch press, where it gets its corners whacked off and holes punched at the right places.

Complicated-Looking Machine. It then goes to a complicated-looking machine that embosses it with numbers, in order. Special steel dies are used on the embosser and each set necessitates a change of dies.

The next time you see your 1941 plate it is on another machine called the rimmer. There it gets "Ga-41" and the slogan, "Peach State," slapped on its face. Each plate also is given a rim.

From the rimmer the tag goes to the paint dip. It is immersed in a bath of blue background enamel and after sufficient dripping is placed on a conveyor and run through the oven for baking. And if you think it isn't hot in that oven, mull over the fact that the average temperature is 250 degrees, Fahrenheit, and 45 minutes to one hour is required for each baking.

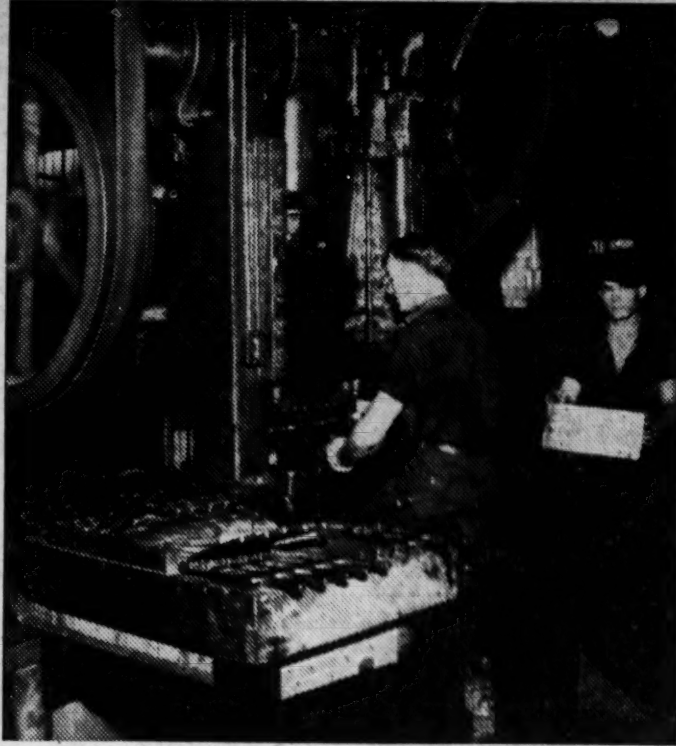

"Peach Line."

The tag then goes on what is known as the "Peach Line." As you probably already know, next year's tag carries a replica of a very delicious-looking peach. It has yellow reflectorized numerals on a blue background.

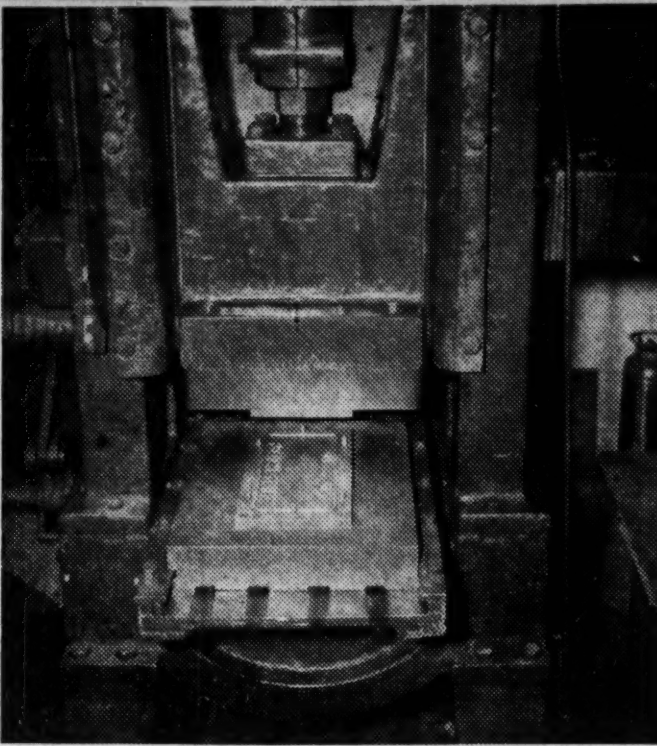

The process of putting the peach on the plate is a bit complicated. Suffice to say, the peach print is transferred from a blotter paper covering to the center of the tag, a process requiring seven men. The tag has to take two more trips through the oven, incidentally.

After the plates are inspected, they are packed in cartons, each holding 50 sets. They are then ready for shipment to the capitol, where they are passed out to distressed automobile owners.

The metal working department at the prison is supervised by C. P. Carter and is one of the industrial units headed by Prison Superintendent George A. Fisher.

EMBRYO TAG—Something that started out as a smooth sheet of metal is well along the way toward being a 1941 license plate. Here the metal is being embossed with numbers. The man at the right gives you an idea of what the embryo tag looks like off the machine.

ANOTHER STAGE—The metamorphosis of the 1941 tag continues. It is now being embossed with "Ga-41" and the slogan, "Peach State," by a machine known as the rimmer. In the same process a rim is given each plate. From this machine the tag goes to the paint dip.

FINISHED PRODUCT—Snappy, bright 1941 license plates finally emerge from a long series of processes, some of which are not shown in this group of pictures. The 1941 tag is considerably larger than the 1940 model, has reflectorized yellow letters on a blue background.

Council Urges Underpass for Simpson Street

U. S., Georgia Asked To Co-operate in Building Improvement.

Co-operation of the State Highway Department and the Federal Bureau of Roads was asked officially yesterday by the city when Acting Mayor Frank H. Reynolds approved a council resolution specifically urging the highway department to construct an underpass beneath N. C. & St. L. and Southern Railway tracks at Simpson street as the first step in development of an east and west traffic and military boulevard.

No cost estimates for the project have yet been made. Under tentative plans the improvement would pass beneath the railway tracks, Marietta and Luckie streets, Simpson street would be widened and repaved to form a new important artery between the eastern and western sections of the city.

Teacher, 70, Says Work Helped Push Back Age

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Dec. 17.—(UP)—A. O. Garrett, recently retired teacher at East High school is taking life easy after 38 years of teaching the fundamentals of botany and biology to thousands of pupils from Kansas and Utah.

Garrett began teaching in the days of the Three R's, tight trousers and gingham dresses in various schools of Kansas. He came to Salt Lake City in 1902 and was employed until his 70th birthday in the local high schools.

At a birthday party, Garrett told students, who presented him with an easy chair, that the youth of his students had kept him young and spry throughout the half century he had devoted to the teaching profession.

Alumni Group's Big Trouble Is Lost Graduates

Other Problems Discussed as Session Closes Here.

The conference of American Alumni Council in its second day session yesterday in Atlanta placed one of the greatest problems confronting alumni secretaries as keeping up with college graduates. Many of the college alumni, they say, don't make news and become lost from the files of their university office.

The alumni secretaries discussed leading issues yesterday, the raising of funds from graduates, publishing a magazine for alumni, and primarily setting up a Southeastern University Center. But they pulled away from the strictly serious aspects and swapped yarns about lost alumni.

Charles Post McCurdy Jr., newly elected chairman of the Third District, American Alumni Council, yesterday told a tale of a graduate of the college at William and Mary with the class of 1874, who, so far as the alumni files showed, had been dead for 25 years; but how, when, or why, the records did not disclose. An official in the school drove into a tourist court in Clearwater, Fla., in 1937, registered, and the feeble old operator said he was a William and Mary alumnus. They chatted for a while, then upon her return to Williamsburg, she called McCurdy. "Why, that man's been dead for years," McCurdy told her. Now, at 86, he's the oldest living graduate and he has every reason to think he'll be on hand for the college's 250th anniversary in 1943.

B. Ramage, senior steward; J. D. Latham, junior steward; Wallace W. Rhodes, chaplain; A. D. McCain, tyler, and L. P. Johnson, organist. The retiring master was presented with the past masters' jewel.

McCormick was elected at the twenty-eighth annual meeting of the Capitol View lodge. He succeeds William J. Jacobs. Other officers named were: Z. L. Murdock, senior warden; G. G. May, senior deacon; H. A. McGee, junior deacon; H. H. Lyle, senior steward; and L. R. Spurlin, junior steward; R. G. Snell, tyler, and the Rev. W. Lee Cutts, chaplain. W. H. Lyle and A. J. Jansen were re-elected treasurer and secretary.

Two Lodges Name Leaders For New Year

H. T. Briscoe and E. F. McCormick Elected Worshipful Masters.

Two Atlanta lodges have elected new officers for the coming year. Herbert T. Briscoe has been named worshipful master of the Gate City Lodge No. 2, F. & A. M., to succeed Theodore J. Whitehead. E. F. McCormick was chosen worshipful master of Capitol View Lodge No. 640.

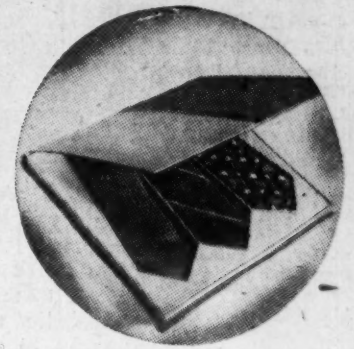

The Gate City group held its fifty-third annual communication, and Briscoe and the following other officers were installed: C. Fred Mongareide, senior warden; James H. Watkins, junior warden; Larkin D. Cathcart, treasurer; Charles E. Hall Jr., secretary; Charles C. Edenfield, senior deacon; Francis J. Dwyer, junior deacon; James

Cattle Brand Initials Remain Town's Name

JAL, N. M., Dec. 17.—(UP)—Whereabouts of the man responsible for the name of this rich little New Mexico oil and cattle town are unknown. He was J. A. Lynch, who gave the JAL ranch its brand of "J" on the shoulder, "A" on the side and "L" on the hip of cattle. He sold his holdings and disappeared. According to Jal citizens he was running cattle before the turn of the century and some suspect he is dead, but nothing was heard of him after he left town.

Many Favor Special Training Of Women for Wartime Work

Poll Shows Nearly Half Approve Idea Raised by Mrs. Roosevelt To Draft Women; More Women Than Men Favor Plan.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.
Copyright, 1940.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 17.—(P)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has raised the question whether the young women of America should be drafted for national defense training.

"I imagine the time is coming," she said at the recent Woman's Congress, "when we are going to have to face this question. There have been many requests to the government that some specific training be given to women and girls in national defense, but so far it is a topic that officials shun like the plague."

To determine what the people of the country think about this issue, and whether they, too, would shun such a program "like the plague," the American Institute of Public Opinion, through its nationwide staff of interviewers, has gathered the view of men and women in all parts of the country.

The result shows that a substantial number of voters—nearly one-half—favors the idea of training women now for wartime work.

"Would you be in favor of starting now to draft American women between the ages of 21 and 35 to train them for jobs in wartime?"

ALL VOTERS

Yes	48%
No	52%

Only one person in 16 (6 per cent) expressed no opinion on this issue.

An interesting sidelight in today's study is that woman voters are substantially more in favor of the training-for-women idea than men are. Among women between the ages of 21 and 35—those who would be affected—the suggestion is approved by a majority.

Approve Women's Training Program

Men Voters	44%	Disapprove	56%
Women Voters (Total)	52%		48%
Women Voters, Aged 21-35	54%		46%

The greatest desire to have women share defense training with men is found in the lower income group. Voters in this level, comprised of families earning $20 a week or less, are in favor of the drafting of women (55 per cent), whereas a majority of those in the middle and upper income level oppose the idea.

Approve Women's Training Program

Upper Income Voters	42%	Disapprove	58%
Middle Income Voters	44%		56%
Lower Income Voters	55%		45%

Voters in favor of a training program have two chief reasons—first, that in modern "total" warfare it is essential that women be trained for emergency work; and second, that women should share equal responsibility with men in defending the country.

Union Leader Crash Injuries Defends Wages Are Fatal to Cobb Youth

Solon Charges Workers on Roof Get 'Outrageous' Pay.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(P)—Charges by Representative Engel, Republican, Michigan, that structural iron workers were getting "outrageous" wages for repairing the roofs of the capitol, drew from an AFL official today a reply that Engel "ignores or deliberately seeks to hide the pertinent facts."

Engel told the house yesterday that a foreman had been paid as high as $267.50 a week, that one worker received $247.52 for a two-week period; that another received $254.98, and that another foreman received $465 for two weeks. He added that "men of this type" would be responsible if congress enacted anti-strike legislation.

John Locher, secretary of the Washington Building and Construction Trades Council, replied in a statement today that the roof repair was an "emergency job," that there was danger of the roof falling in, and that the workers worked overtime and on Saturdays and Sundays.

Their union rate, he said, was $2 an hour for a 30-hour week, determined by the Labor Department under the Bacon-Davis act as the prevailing rate for the skill in this community.

"Overtime rates of pay," Locher said, "are set by unions at punitive levels, not to provide swollen pay envelopes for a few workers, but to induce employers to spread the work among a greater number of employees at regular rates of pay and thus relieve unemployment."

CIO Will Offer Plan To Speed Up Defense

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(P)—CIO President Philip Murray declared today that defense output was lagging because of the "rather stupid method" by which it had been distributed and administered, and said the CIO would send to President Roosevelt tomorrow its own plan for speeding production and minimizing work stoppages.

The CIO plan is expected to propose that boards be named for the various key defense industries and that defense contracts be awarded to more concerns than are now getting them. The boards would check employer-employee frictions which might result in stoppages.

British Bomb Mannheim for Seven Hours

Nazis Admit Industrial City Bore Brunt of Attack.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(P)—Stealing the Nazi's own thunder, British bombers delivered a seven-hour assault upon the German industrial city of Mannheim in the heaviest of a series of overnight raids from western Germany to the submarine base at Bordeaux, France, the air ministry announced today.

An airplane factory, a dye plant and other military objectives in the Mannheim area were declared left ablaze from the attack, carried out by the light of a bright moon.

In pouncing upon Mannheim for the second time in five days, the British singled out this chief industrial center of the upper Rhine for a fiery dose of the same medicine the Germans have given some of Britain's own industrial cities.

(The German high command acknowledged that 10 persons were killed, 50 injured and damage inflicted in western and southwestern Germany, with Mannheim and another unnamed town bearing the brunt of the attacks. It said two factories were hit, but that the effect on production was "immaterial.")

Wendell Willkie Seeks 'Back-Home' Chairman

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(P)—Close associates said today that Wendell L. Willkie wants the Republican national committee to choose a new chairman, who will represent "the back-home element" in the party and who will favor the "social gains" of the New Deal.

Willkie, here for talks with personal friends, was said to believe that the party should have a chairman who came up from the ranks of Republican organizations, rather than a man well-established in the national political scene.

Friends declared that the 1940 presidential standard bearer believes that a "liberal" new leadership is vital to the effective functioning of the party.

Arkansas Valley Project Proposed

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 17.—(P)—Representative Clyde T. Ellis, Democrat, Arkansas, announced here today the forming of "a rough draft of an Arkansas Valley Authority Act" for the St. Francis, White, Arkansas and Red river drainage basins in eight south-eastern states.

The congressman issued a statement explaining that the plan was based "on the experience of the several water control agencies in the nation, including the Tennessee Valley Authority."

He said the drainage basins affected covers the eight states of Arkansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and Colorado.

West Virginia Explosion Kills 7, Injures 5

Blast Is Sixth Major Mine Disaster of 1940.

BECKLEY, W. Va., Dec. 17.—(P)—An explosion in a mine directly beneath the streets of this southern West Virginia coal "capital" today killed seven men and injured five others in the nation's sixth major mine blast of the year.

The explosion, apparently local in nature, occurred two miles back in the No. 4 mine of the Raleigh Coal and Coke Corporation, which has three operations on the outskirts of the city.

Ellsworth Shriver, superintendent, said an investigation would be started Thursday.

Wendell Willkie Seeks 'Back-Home' Chairman

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(P)—Close associates said today that Wendell L. Willkie wants the Republican national committee to choose a new chairman, who will represent "the back-home element" in the party and who will favor the "social gains" of the New Deal.

Willkie, here for talks with personal friends, was said to believe that the party should have a chairman who came up from the ranks of Republican organizations, rather than a man well-established in the national political scene.

Friends declared that the 1940 presidential standard bearer believes that a "liberal" new leadership is vital to the effective functioning of the party.

MARIETTA, Ga., Dec. 17.—Injuries received in a collision north of Marietta Sunday night were fatal to Raymond Elrod, 20, of Fair Oaks community, this morning. He died in a local hospital.

Funeral services will be conducted at Mount Zion Baptist church at 1:30 o'clock tomorrow, with Rev. A. O. Russell and the Rev. Robert Smith officiating. Interment will be in Powder Springs cemetery.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Elrod, Marietta, Route 4; two sisters, Miss Mae Belle Elrod and Miss Annie Ruth Elrod, Marietta; five brothers, Ralph, Walter, J. C. and Billy Elrod, Marietta; Henry Elrod, Atlanta; his grandfather, A. H. Jones, Marietta.

Miss Doris Nash, of Marietta, Route 4, one of three young people riding in the car with Elrod, remained in the Marietta hospital with a broken leg and arm.

CIO Will Offer Plan To Speed Up Defense

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(P)—CIO President Philip Murray declared today that defense output was lagging because of the "rather stupid method" by which it had been distributed and administered, and said the CIO would send to President Roosevelt tomorrow its own plan for speeding production and minimizing work stoppages.

The CIO plan is expected to propose that boards be named for the various key defense industries and that defense contracts be awarded to more concerns than are now getting them. The boards would check employer-employee frictions which might result in stoppages.

Trend Shows Girls Studying For Careers

Too Many Colleges in South, Alumni Group Member Believes.

By CAROLYN MCKENZIE.
Girls are going to college to learn to be career women, to get a job, and work and not to learn how to fry eggs, sweep floors and keep house as they did in days ago.

This is just the modern trend in American education as cited by members of the American Alumni Council in its second day in conference here Tuesday.

Mrs. Clara B. Byrd, alumnae secretary and editor of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, says that women are becoming more and more interested in the arts—music, interior decorating, and the things which add to her personal charm or enhance the beauty and comfort of her home. The old idea, Mrs. Byrd says, is something like "getting a husband and holding him." But she thinks they are skipping out on grandma's home-making plans, and seeking careers.

Tom Garner, of the University of Alabama, notices particularly the broad field of education today and believes the United States has too many colleges and universities, particularly in the south, where they can't be afforded. They must be co-ordinated, consolidated, or some of them eliminated if the section is to produce outstanding scholars.

Miss Sara Cheatham, of Bessie Tife, says: "In the present crisis, when all phases of politics and the like are in a world of chaos, the educational trend is definitely toward a co-operative spirit in all fields of higher learning and living, friendly competition rather than antagonistic 'hair pulling.'"

Other members of the council agreed that the trend in our modern education seems to be to train students, future alumni, to fit into our democracy, and, moreover, the colleges and universities, alert to their obligation, seem to be preparing themselves to make the contributions that may be expected of them in strengthening and preserving this "American way." This idea, voiced by Ralph Lewis, of South Carolina, is further developed by this thought:

"Apparently the alumni of colleges and universities of this section are definitely becoming more interested in the colleges they represent and in making productive education the main show."

Ice, 100,000 Years Old, Contains Live Bacteria

MOSCOW, Dec. 17. — (AP) — Artists of the Eternal Ice Research Institute expedition to Abkhaz Salt Lake, who returned recently from Siberia, said buried ice formed there "from 50,000 to 100,000 years" ago had yielded "a vast number of live bacteria of peculiar forms," some of soil varieties and the others not yet classified.

A spokesman reported the ice, compressed from great masses of snow in the glacial period, was found under from six to ten feet of soil over an area of "scores of kilometers," its thickness ranging to 72 feet.

Arkansas Oil Gusher

Roars Out of Control

EL DORADO, Ark., Dec. 17. — (AP) — South Arkansas' first oil gusher in several years roared out of control today in the old Rainbow City field northeast of El Dorado when the Rowland No. 1 well, Section 15-17-14, blew in. The well, which observers estimated was flowing at approximately 2,000 barrels daily under heavy pressure, came in for Curtis Kinard, of El Dorado at about 2,800 feet—comparatively shallow. The well blew in about 8 a. m., sending a plume of black crude over the top of the rig, and was still out of control early in the afternoon.

Pope Working on Plan To Send Prisoners Gifts

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 17. — (AP) — A Vatican news agency said today Pope Pius XII was trying to evolve a plan to send Christmas greetings and gifts to prisoners of war in Italy and Italian prisoners of war held by the British and Greeks.

The announcement modified Italian reports the Pope would send gifts to all war prisoners through the nuncios and apostolic delegates in various countries. The agency said it was evident such gifts could not be sent to the vast numbers of prisoners throughout Europe and added the plan still awaited a definite decision.

Crowding Being Eased In London Shelters

LONDON, Dec. 17. — (AP) — Herbert Morrison, minister of home security, said today additional shelter accommodations for 105,000 persons had been provided since October, and the "worst of overcrowding" in big shelters is now a thing of the past.

Morrison, speaking at the opening of an exhibition of pictures of London life under air raids, said 206,000 bunks had been installed and 200,000 more had been delivered, but were not yet installed because of a labor shortage.

English Housewife, 42, To Die for Treason

LONDON, Dec. 17. — (AP) — Mrs. Dorothy Pamela O'Grady, 42, a housewife, was sentenced to death for treason at the Hampshire assizes today.

She was convicted under the official secrets acts and defense regulations, it was announced.

"This year we all chipped in and bought an RCA Victrola"

... SAID A CUSTOMER AT RICH'S!

"All of us agreed that we should club together and replace our old radio with a new RCA Victrola. Guess you wonder how all five of us could come to the same conclusion! Sis was sold on it from the first... said that if great artists preferred RCA Victor, they couldn't be wrong. Dad's a stickler for old favorites... said he'd stake his money on the instrument of 'His Master's Voice'—that it was the finest in his younger days, and as far as he was concerned it was the finest now. Of course, Mother agreed with Dad. But Jim and I had to see for ourselves... so we went to Rich's to see the complete line-up of new models—to compare them with others, check them feature by feature, hear them in soundproof rooms... that's why we were unanimous for an RCA Victrola."

Maybe your family has been thinking of doing the same thing—going in together on one important, truly magnificent gift the whole family will enjoy and be proud of it, a gift not just for this Christmas but for years to come. An RCA Victor Radio or Victrola is just such a gift.

Give the world's finest entertainment!

Festivities for College Set To Enliven Christmas Week

• • • NEVER HAS CHRISTMAS WEEK been so crowded with parties! Never has the sub-deb contingent gone quite so mad with holiday plans, all of which will make the forthcoming Yuletide one of the gayest in Atlanta's history.

The postman did not have to wait for Christmas week to inaugurate his heavy-duty routine this season. For a fortnight the mails have been jammed with letters from college belles to "the folks" concerning plans for Yule festivities. And today Sally gives you a peep into some of the colorful invitations that add distinction to the postman's collection.

The elaborate open house at which Bunny Stribling, Frances Longino, Louise Lamar and Jean Lockridge will entertain next Sunday will be a veritable reunion for the college set, this affair to be one of the first to assemble

Debutante Duo Will Be Honored.

The Christmas week social calendar will be featured by the elaborate holiday breakfast to be given on December 24 by Mrs. Walter Taulman and her daughter, Miss Helen Taulman.

Honor guests will be Misses Margaret Winship and Barbara Indell, two of the most feted of the debutantes.

The affair takes place at the home of the hostesses on Club drive and will assemble a group of the debutante and school set.

Miss Taulman arrives tomorrow from Hollins College to visit her parents for the holidays.

Jean's home on West Andrews drive, and Mesdames Edwin Lockridge, Hinton Longino, Glenn Lamar and J. W. Stribling will assist their pretty daughters in receiving their guests.

Bunny, you know, attends St. Mary's School in Raleigh, N. C.; Jean goes to William and Mary; Louise is a student at Arlington Hall, and Frances is enrolled at Sweetbriar.

Mrs. Stribling will be hostess Monday evening at an informal buffet supper in compliment to Bunny's attractive cousins, Betty and David DuPre, of Washington, D. C., who arrive earlier that day to spend the holidays at the Stribling residence on West Andrews drive.

Thirty-five youthful socialites will be invited to meet the pair, who will be admired figures attending the Christmas party series.

Another gala social affair planned for Sunday is the open house at which Mrs. Robert White Sr. will entertain in compliment to Mary and Jennie Hancock who, with their mother, Mrs. Margaret White Hancock, arrive Thursday from Sea Island for a visit here.

December 23 is the date selected by attractive Betty Burress for the tea at which she will entertain from 4 to 6 o'clock at her Brookwood Hills residence.

One hundred guests have been invited to the affair, the youthful hostess to be assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. J. R. Burress. Betty is a freshman at Agnes Scott College, and the party will honor her out-of-town college friends.

The many admirers of Alice Johnson, popular daughter of the Trimble Johnsons, anticipate her arrival from Sweetbriar College on Saturday. An additional pleasure is in store for them, however, for Alice will be joined on December 30 by her roommate, Jane Williams, of Chattanooga, who will be one of the loveliest of the Yule visitors.

Addavale and Mary Alice McDougall, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William L. McDougall, will be hostesses on December 28 at a tea from 4 to 6 o'clock at their home on Blackland road. The party will assemble 125 friends of the lovely sisters, who are students at Washington Seminary, and will be a festive affair enlivening the Christmas social calendar.

The bevy of attractive sub-debs who will assist in entertaining includes Helen Beaudry, Mary Sutherland, Jessie Strickland, Dorothy Grove, Raiford Ragsdale, Nancy McLarty, Betty Pitts, Sally Prescott, Frances Grove and Anne DuPre.

The Piedmont Driving Club will be the scene on Saturday evening for the dinner party at which Anne McGonigal will entertain 12 of her intimate friends.

Anne, you know, attends the Finch School in New York City, and will reach Atlanta on Saturday to spend the Christmas holidays at the Georgian Terrace with Mrs. Whitman McGonigal.

• • • WHEN Mrs. Paul Reese moved recently to a larger apartment in the St. Andrews, she decorated her kitchen after the Mexican manner. And the result is so unusual and attractive that the kitchen is now one of the most inviting rooms of the apartment.

A Mexican straw hat of huge proportions, which Mr. Reese brought from one of his recent trips to that country, suggested the novel decorative motif to Mrs. Reese. The hat is tacked flat to the long wall of the room, and its gay colors are repeated in the tiled linoleum on the floor and in the sheer printed curtains at the windows.

A wall lamp wears a shade made of a small Mexican sombrero, edged with small ball fringe.

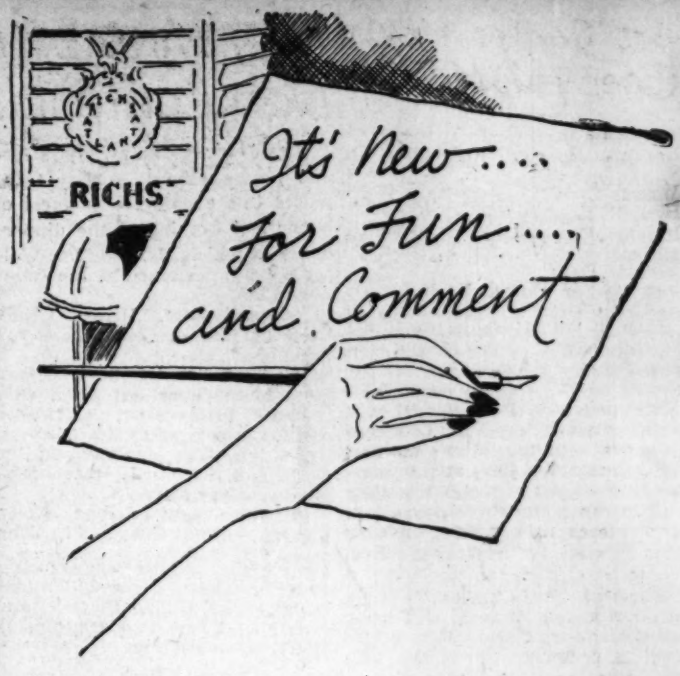

When Mrs. Reese's friends heard of her new theme of decoration, they presented her with all kinds of Mexican gadgets. There are fat Mexican figures that hold tea, coffee and sugar. There are Mexican burros from which salt and pepper are shaken. All sizes of glasses bear quaint native figures and there is a set of colorful Mexican china. Gaily-striped bottles of different sizes and shapes hold sauces and condiments, and even a can of Old Dutch cleanser is painted with dancing Spanish señoritas.

Cup towels and dishcloths are embroidered with Mexican designs in bright blues, reds and yellows. Cocktail napkins are printed with Mexican figures, and even the kitchen clock is of Mexican design.

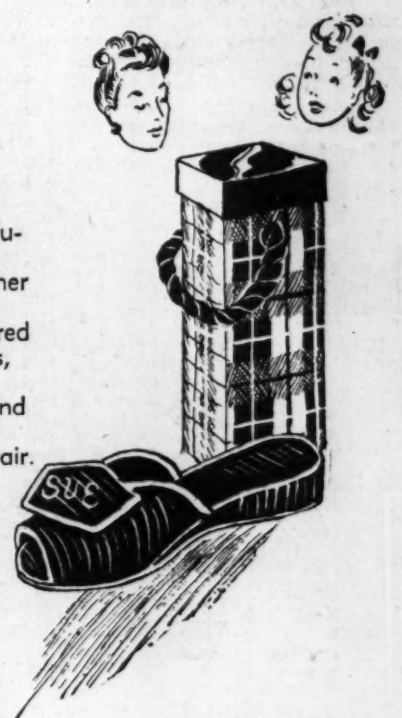

A dash of brilliant color—and a note that is undeniably redolent of the territory "south of the border"—is found in the gay patio strings that adorn the walls. The strings are made of gourds, peppers, pine cones, etc., painted in the brilliant hues that all Mexicans love.

• • • AMONG important visitors arriving in Atlanta this week are Mr. and Mrs. Lino L. Sertel, who reach here Friday to spend the weekend at the Biltmore hotel. Mrs. Sertel is editor of the Social Register in Miami, Fla., and they have a host of friends in this city.

The prominent pair will attend the dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving Club on Saturday evening as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Ransom and Mr. and Mrs. Dowell Brown.

Art Center Holds Open House Daily

Atlanta Art Center, a project of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Raymond H. Wolfe, president, and Miss Minna McLeod Beck, director, will hold open house daily from 9:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. beginning today and continuing through Monday of next week, for the staff artists of the center, students and invited artists. The Art Center is located at 679 Piedmont avenue, second floor of the Kreighsheber Memorial Library for the Blind.

On display will be paintings, etchings, pottery, leathercraft, wood and metal craft and art novelties.

The center is also making new and interesting plans for the new session starting on January 6.

Ida Strawn Baker, artist of Indianapolis, who stopped to visit Atlanta artists en route to Florida, where she will paint this winter, will be presented by the Art Center in a lecture-demonstration of offset printing at 3 o'clock Thursday at the center. There is no admission fee and the public is invited. Taking its place with etchings and lithograph, the press is devised for linoleum blocks that are type high.

Phi Chi Theta Will Give Ball.

Among the many gay affairs planned for the holiday season is the formal Mistletoe Ball to be given this evening in the Georgian room of the Biltmore hotel by the Upsilon chapter of Phi Chi Theta, national women's professional fraternity.

Christmas decorations will be featured throughout the hall. Members of the sorority will wear sprigs of mistletoe in their hair and their escorts will have mistletoe boutonnieres.

The dance will honor the following pledges: Misses Pauline Berry, Florence Camp, Lois Dozier, Dorothy Escott, Caroline Reid, Mary Shelton, and Dorothy Strange.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Raymond Curtis will act as chaperons.

Capitol View P.-T. A.

The children of Capitol View school will hold open house and present a Christmas program this morning. At the last P.-T. A. meeting the Year Book was distributed. The theme for the year is "Educating for Living in a Democracy." P.-T. A. members presented the school with venetian blinds for the auditorium.

Miss Elsa McCall Makes Bow At Elaborate Club Reception

gathered at the Piedmont Driving Club yesterday afternoon for the elaborate reception given by Mrs. Howard McCall Jr. to introduce her debutante daughter, Miss Elsa McCall, to married and unmarried circles. Miss McCall is the popular president of the 1940-41 Debutante Club and has been feted at a series of social affairs during the season which was highlighted by her formal presentation yesterday.

Mrs. McCall and Miss McCall received their guests in the entrance hall, standing at the door which leads into the living room of the spacious club. The arched doorway was banked with palms and fern and was in effective contrast to the colorful array of flowered plates back of the receiving line and on the console tables, the beautiful floral tributes being sent the lovely debutante on the auspicious date.

In the entrance hall greenery was used in effective arrangement, with trailing smilax festooning the large mirrors. The lights and the windows were hung with wreaths tied with huge red satin bows.

In the living room a cheery log fire burned in the open fireplace. The long buffet table was placed to the side of the fireplace and covered with a handsome imported lace cloth. Marking the center was an arrangement of red roses and white snapdragons in a sunburst design, which was placed on a mirrored plaque encircled in dainty flowers repeating the red and white color motif. At either side of the centerpiece were handsome silver candelabra, and completing the appointments were silver coffee and tea services. The lights and mirrors in the living room were decorated with greenery. The console tables placed throughout the room were decorated with white flowers.

Miss McCall's exquisite blonde beauty was enhanced by her handsome period gown of white brocade satin threaded in silver. A becoming feature was the off-the-shoulder neckline of the tight bodice which extended to the new low neckline, where the long skirt achieved fullness by means of shirring. Miss McCall carried an old-fashioned round bouquet of lavender orchids encircled with sweetheart roses, pink and white sweet peas, and lilies of the valley, tied with pale blue velvet ribbon. In her hair she wore a single white orchid.

Mrs. McCall, the hostess, was a handsome figure in an afternoon model of blue metal cloth shot with silver. The sleeves were short and the neckline was finished with handsome rhinestone clips. Her flowers were deep purple orchids.

Popular Visitors Will Be Honored

The holiday social calendar continues to be filled with festive parties honoring popular visitors. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jeter, of Raleigh, N. C., arrive Sunday to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Yopp at their home on Piedmont road.

On Monday Mrs. Hubert Ravizer will entertain at a bridge-luncheon honoring Mrs. Jeter, and on the same afternoon Mrs. George Ripley will be hostess at an open house for the lovely North Carolina matron.

Mr. and Mrs. Yopp have selected December 26 as the date for the open house at which they will honor their guests. The affair will be held at their home and will assemble a large group of friends of the hosts.

Additional parties have been planned for the popular visitors, the dates and nature of these affairs to be announced later.

Seminary Holds Benefit Party Today.

The annual Christmas party at the Washington Seminary will be held at noon today in the school gymnasium. The party will be given by the sophomore class, under the direction of Mrs. Richard Morenus, class sponsor.

The second-year students will serve refreshments and entertain their guests with songs and dances. Prizes will be awarded for the most entertaining acts.

Miss Jeanne Davidson, president of the sophomore class, and Miss Frances Grove are in charge of arrangements. Funds from the party will be used to purchase food and clothing for the needy.

Americanism Program

At an Americanism program sponsored by the West End Unit 147, of the American Legion, at its Ashby street home, under direction of Mrs. Ernest Bass, the unit's Americanism chairman, discussion was held on what Americanism and Democracy mean to America, the obligations and privileges of Americans. These subjects were presented by the following speakers: Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin, Mrs. Geo. W. Harris, state Americanism chairman of the American Legion Auxiliary; J. Walter LeCraw, state Americanism chairman of the American Legion, and Rabbi David Marx.

Arts Study Group.

Mrs. Herbert B. Roth, chairman of the Study Group on the Arts, of the American Association of University Women, announces that the meeting which was scheduled on Symphonic Music for January 2 has been canceled, the next meeting of this group has been planned for February 8 at Atlanta University, the program to cover Negro art, music and poetry.

mother of the debutante, was beautifully gowned in black lace combined with satin, and her flowers were gardenias. Miss Lilien Tidwell, aunt of the debutante, was a lovely figure wearing blue lace with pink rosebuds.

Presiding at the coffee and tea tables were Mesdames Gilbert Beers, Charles Brown, of Marietta; Norman Coleedge, and Edward Cauthorn. Assisting in entertaining were Mesdames E. M. Seabrook Jr., Warren Moore, Varney Ward, Frank Sites, Fort Adams, James Budd, George Campbell, Griggs Shaefer, William J. Draper, John Moore Walker and Hinton F. Longino.

The debutante chose a group of her closest friends to assist, including Misses Emmelyn Carter, Mary Elizabeth Beers and Gladys Randall, all members of the Debutante Club, and Jane Brightwell, of Athens.

Suppers Postponed.

The weekly suppers which the parish council of the Cathedral of St. Philip sponsors, have been postponed until Thursday, January 2, at which time the members will begin serving suppers regularly.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of very effective and quick-acting cough remedy, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving you delightful relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

MRS. LAMAR ELLIOTT KEMP.

Miss Carter and Mr. Kemp Marry in Charlotte, N. C.

Willis Redding Carter, of Valdosta, Ga., announces the marriage of his daughter, Miss Willis Carter, to Lamar Elliott Kemp, of Atlanta and Valdosta, which was solemnized in Charlotte, N. C., on December 6.

The lovely bride wore a traveling suit of an orchid hue, and a shoulder spray of orchids. Her brown fur hat was of the same material as her coat, and her accessories were brown.

The bride is the younger daughter of Willis Redding Carter and the late Mrs. Mary Clyde Brown Carter, of Valdosta. Her maternal grandparents are the late Mrs. Amanda Caroline Ragan Brown and Jessie H. Brown, of Quitman, Ga. Her paternal grandparents are the late Mrs. Harriett Caroline Miller Carter and George P. Carter, pioneer families of south Georgia. She is the sister of Mrs. Dorrie Smith, of Valdosta, and her brothers are Clyde B. Carter, Gainesville, and Alton Carter, Valdosta.

Mrs. Kemp attended the public schools of Valdosta, G. S. W. C., Valdosta, and Southern Business University, Atlanta. She is now connected with the Boy Scouts of America, Atlanta Area Council office.

The groom is the son of Thomas Ardell Kemp Sr., Valdosta. His only brother is Thomas Ardell Kemp Jr., of Lexington, Ky., and Valdosta.

Mr. Kemp was honor graduate of Valdosta High school in 1930. He attended Oglethorpe University, South Georgia State College, Douglas, and graduated from the University of Georgia in 1936. He was prominently connected with the student publications in each of these colleges. He was the founder of The Georgia Arch, student monthly magazine at the University of Georgia, and was a member of the varsity debate teams, being a member of the championship team of 1935. He was affiliated with Pi Kappa Phi social fraternity at Oglethorpe University. Mr. Kemp is a member of the board of directors of the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce, and is connected with the advertising department of the Atlantic Steel Company, Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. Kemp are residing at 1492 Ponce de Leon avenue.

Auxiliary Meets This Evening.

Ladies Auxiliary to Marcus W. Beck Jr. Post No. 3027, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, met recently in the Chamber of Commerce building with Mrs. Lucille Irvine, president, presiding. Mrs. Clifford Brady was inducted into membership.

The auxiliary meets this evening at 7:30 o'clock with the president at 1209 Arkwright place, S. E. After the meeting members will exchange Christmas gifts, play games and participate in contests.

The hospital committee, Mrs. Bertha Gossett and Misses Fannie Thomas, Lillian Burton, Ida Bell Mercer, Etta Haley and Ethel Smith and other members will visit the ward adopted by Marcus W. Beck Jr. Post and auxiliary and present gifts to the 22 patients at United States hospital.

On December 29 from 2:30 to 5 o'clock, hospital chairman, Mrs. Gossett, will have Mrs. Jessie Reese and her orchestra to entertain the veterans at a Christmas party. Refreshments will be served by members of the auxiliary. Joseph Sitton, commander, will speak and officers of Post No. 3027 will attend. Auxiliaries throughout the state will be represented by their hospital chairmen and Mrs. Marion Everett, state hospital chairman, and Mrs. Alice Brittain, national deputy chief of staff, will speak.

For Joyful Cough Relief, Try This Home Mixture

Real Relief. Big Saving. So Easy. No Cooking.

This splendid recipe is used by millions every year, because it makes such a dependable, effective remedy for coughs due to colds. It's so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any drugist, get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex, a compound containing Norway Pine and palatable guaiacol, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial membranes.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. It's no trouble at all, and takes but a moment. No cooking needed.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of very effective and quick-acting cough remedy, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving you delightful relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

Judy Garland Prefers Her 30-Year-Old Escort to Younger Men

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 17.—I will be very surprised if the Ginger Rogers-Howard Hughes marriage rumor turns into fact. The last time I talked with Howard, he stated emphatically, "I will not marry an actress." One of the chief reasons for his erstwhile fondness for Olivia de Havilland was less like an actress than any actress he knew. That was 18 months ago. "Livy" has since changed her name to Judy Garland. She discusses her 30-year-old beau, Dave Rose. "An older man," says Judy, "is more understanding than a young man, who usually wants to kid too much."

Edmund Goulding reads a local column that has him renting his Palm Springs house to Greta Garbo. "Will you do me a favor?" he asks. "If I can," says this reporter cautiously. "Just put in your column that I never rent my Palm Springs house to Garbo or anyone. I loan it to them. Income tax people keep asking me, 'Where's the money you received from renting that house?'"

Blonde Virginia Grey looks at blonder Marion Martin and says, "She does nothing—just sits there, and steals every scene" (in "Fools Rush In"—where brunettes fear to tread?).

Barbara Stanwyck turns saleswoman between shots on "Lady Eve." "Anyone want to buy a house?" she asks. For the ridiculous price of $60,000, you can now have Barbara's valley home, including the championship tennis court Mr. Taylor bought for her birthday the year before they were married. Mickey Rooney removes his overcoat outside a theater—and a battalion of studio officials rush to put it back on Mickey. The "flu germ" is too active at this moment for money-makers of the Rooney caliber to take a chance. Cary Grant's stand-in is the best dressed man of his profession. He gets all of Cary's used clothes.

Robert Donat's small son accosts his neighbor, Charles Vido, and asks, "Dye know who my father is?" Charles pretends ignorance, and the boy launches into a catalogue of his pop's achievements that would do credit to a press agent. Donat's wife and family are here for the duration. Jimmy Stewart is being rushed through his pictures so that when he gets the expected call to the colors, he will be seen on the screen the entire 12 months he is in training. But if they keep working him so hard, the boy will have a breakdown and won't be able to finish his picture or join the Army Air Force or whatever it is.

Wallace Beery slumps into a chair on "The Bad Man" set; perspiration pours down his leathery face. "I'm tired," he tells me. "Tired of listening to myself speak with a Mexican accent."

It ought to be second nature by now to Wally. He's been playing Mexicans for as long as I can remember. Rita Hayworth has the biggest shoe wardrobe in town. It contains at least 100 pairs. Marlene Dietrich has the same sort of fetish for hats. She just can't resist buying 'em. Some of the chapeaus she gives away have been worn once or less.

Measurement Scale Checks Figure

By Ida Jean Kain.

If you haven't taken the screen test for symmetry, you should. While the standard is a shade too streamlined for anyone who likes to eat three square meals a day, it gives you a measurement scale that takes structure into account. First, measure the wrist. With a medium frame, the wrist averages six inches. If you have small framebones, your wrist may measure five and one-half inches. And with a wide frame, the wrist may measure six and one-half inches. According to the scale worked out by Lou Hippe, of Warner Brothers, your waist should be four and one-fourth times the wrist measurement; the hips, six times; the chest, measured above the bust, five and one-half times. The bust may measure from one and one-half to three inches larger than the bust and be lovely. Let's see how some of the movie stars measure up.

Take Virginia Bruce. Her wrist measures six and one-half inches and to conform to the rule, she should have this figure: Bust, 37 inches; waist, 27 1/2 inches; hips, 50 inches. Miss Bruce is five feet six and one-half inches tall and weighs 128 pounds. Here are her actual measurements: Bust, 36 inches; waist, 27 1/2 inches; hips, 48 inches. Not bad!

Myrna Loy's wrist measures six inches. According to the Hippe scale she should have this figure: Bust, 34 1/2 inches; waist, 25 1/2 inches; hips, 36 inches. But here are her measurements: Bust, 33 inches; waist, 26 inches; hips, 37 inches.

The movie stars are frequently flat-chested due to the fact that they must keep their weight pared down almost to extreme lines. But that's something the designer has to worry about!

One of the loveliest Hollywood figures is that of petite Jean Parker. Her wrist measures five and one-half inches, which means the rest of her measurements should be like this: Bust, 33 inches; waist, 23 1/2 inches; hips, 45 inches. But she has a better figure! Her measurements are: Bust, 34 inches; waist, 22 inches; hips, 34 inches.

Anna Neagle's beautiful and shining hair is not mere coincidence. Hair like this takes plenty of daily care and attention. Miss Neagle is currently starred in RKO Radio's "No, No, Nanette."

Hair Rinse Brings Hidden Highlights to the Surface

By Winifred Ware.

With the festive, holiday spirit in the air, there must be beauty in your hair. What is more exciting or more beautiful than hair that is beautifully highlighted and glowing with the sheen of health? Such hair, well arranged, can make attractive the plainest girl. Eternally appealing is well-groomed hair, and the basis of beautiful, shining hair is cleanliness and good health.

But maybe your hair problem is like that of many others. It's the problem of getting a sheen and luster in the hair, regardless of the treatments or care you give the hair. A certain cosmetic which does nothing but create preparations to glamorize the hair, recently brought out a hair rinse that makes highlights in the hair. The cosmetics say their recent jaunt to the South Seas inspired this creation and they refer to their new rinse as "the magic of golden Hawaiian sunshine imprisoned in a bottle of innocent-looking liquid."

Well, we tried it immediately, for we have a head of very dull, lifeless hair, and the rinse turned out to be most effective, and we began to see a sheen we haven't had for quite a long time. It's so simple to use. Just uncork this bottle of "innocent-looking liquid" and pour a little bit into the last rinsing water after the shampoo and rinse the hair in it thoroughly and leave it on. You can almost see the starry highlights dance into the hair, giving it new luster and shine.

This rinse may be used confidently for every type and color of hair, for it merely brings to the surface the hidden highlights; it will give a new sheen and luster to the hair, enhancing its natural beauty. Something else, it's economical, costing only $1 and lasting for a good many rinses. Call me and let me tell you the name of this hair rinse and where you may buy a bottle. Write to Winifred Ware at The Constitution, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope, if you don't live in Atlanta.

Play Guitar By Diagram Method

The girl who can play the guitar—her music sets up a magic circle of warmth and friendliness, a circle in which people happily gather round her!

Learning to play the guitar is not nearly as difficult, as you may think. Simple diagrams and direction show you how to play solos and accompany a song. In your first lessons you learn to play the notes of the musical scale on the guitar strings.

By the same clear as daylight method you learn the other strings, how to play simple little tunes on your guitar. Then with more easy diagrams you learn to play accompaniments to songs and finally you're ready for full-fledged solos!

You're a somebody in your crowd when you can play the guitar! Our 24-page instruction book, Teach Yourself to Play the Guitar, explains the right technique of playing the guitar, correct fingering, where to find notes on the fingerboard. Gives rudiments of music, table of chords for accompaniments and four tunes arranged as solos. Book is 81-2 by 12 inches.

MY DAY: Repeating Good Entertainment

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Monday.—Late yesterday afternoon we attended the party given by Mr. Mark Foote, the president of the Gridiron Club, and Mrs. Foote, at which some of the stunts and songs of the previous night's dinner were repeated for the benefit of the ladies. It was really a delightful performance and this year they made fun of themselves as well as of their distinguished guests.

I always enjoy these entertainments. Even when it seems that they are a bit cruel to some of the people, I felt it is probably good for us to see ourselves as others see us, even though the way they see us is not always strictly truthful according to our own ideas.

However, I am a little doubtful sometimes whether any of us, in our efforts to be amusing, should ever lampoon anything which is attached to an ideal which must be preserved and, therefore, we cannot risk destroying even by gentle humor. I may, of course, be wrong about this. Any ideal which cannot survive lampooning and satirizing may not be worth consideration as an ideal, but the fact that it is an ideal is something that should be kept in mind by all of us who have a funny-bone and a tendency to little reverence.

I received a communication from the United Mine Workers the other day which I think we should consider very carefully. Many of you have probably read with horror, as I have, of accidents in various mines. The total of human lives lost may seem small when we consider the war in Europe, but it is important to a nation at peace. There is a bill which was introduced in congress, known as the Neely-Keller mine inspection bill. Since its introduction, 1,598 workers have died in accidents, some of which are believed to be due to faulty inspection.

I know only too well that no legislation can completely correct any situation, but it seems to me that the people of this country would not want to neglect any steps which might make a little safer the lives of the men in this industry.

Composite Letter From Reader

By Dr. William Brady.

Here is a composite letter from too many correspondents:

Dear Dr. Brady: What chance has a woman 39 years of age of safely bearing her first child? Depression forced us to postpone marriage ten years. We could have been married sooner, had we not had obligations and not been too proud to take a chance of going on welfare. We have been married three years. I have kept my job to help get established. We have no bills, have good health and a little saved for a rainy day. Now life would be perfect with a baby to hold. I would be willing to endure anything for a healthy child, but I don't want to die, and I wouldn't wish to bear a delicate child.

(Mrs. ....) If a woman of forty can roll a somersault, climb a tree and jump over a gate, she need have no fear of childbirth. Accurate records of childbirth in a large series of cases showed that the healthy woman who bears her first child at forty may expect a normal delivery.

I said a healthy woman. If the tests mentioned seem at all out of line to a woman in her thirties she is probably not a healthy woman at all, but one who has grown prematurely old.

Ought to be a law against old women getting married. Old codgers, too. From the number of such letters I receive it would seem that there are too many married folk—it is hardly fair to call them families—that have everything but the baby. By the time they begin to think that maybe they can afford to have a baby, there ain't goin' to be any baby.

If I were king I'd issue an order in council making it obligatory for every married couple to have at least one child within three years after marriage, and I'd impose a stiff annual tax or fine on such couples until they had babies of their own or adopted some.

After all, it may be just as well for the country if folk of that sort remain childless forever. I am speaking of people who marry and intentionally remain childless.

On the other hand, people who marry and suffer the sad disappointment of childlessness deserve all the sympathy and help we can give them.

It should be remembered that a marriage is not fairly considered barren or fruitless until three years have passed. Then, if conception has not occurred, it is time to consult the physician. It should be remembered also that the man is at least as likely as the woman to prove the sterile partner in a barren marriage. It is foolish and extravagant to assume that the woman is sterile, until the man's fertility has been established by microscopical tests.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS V-I-T-E Spells Youth.

From my own experience in raising a boy it seems to me that your booklet "V-I-T-E Spells Youth" should be invaluable to parents after children have outgrown the famous Brady Bette Baby Book. Although the booklet purports to teach how to insure more vitality and vigor in childhood and adolescence it seems to me it teaches much more than that. (Mrs. H. C.)

Answer—Thank you, little mother. Copy of the booklet, which deals with cachexia, scholastic, simple nutritional anemia, spinal curvature, chronic fatigue, fatigue posture and other common juvenile deficiencies, available on request if you inclose ten cents and stamped envelope bearing your address.

Ben Is Back. Find that my three-month-old baby sleeps thru until morning if I lay him on his tummy. But have been told it is very bad for him. Please tell me whether it harms him in any way to sleep in this position. (Mrs. D. C.)

Answer—On the contrary it is the natural position for sleep, if the baby seems to like it. Tell Ben Told to go jump in the lake.

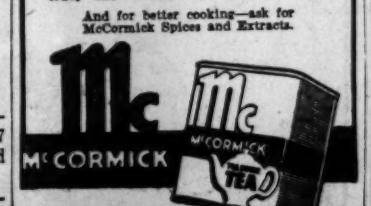

Yes, Indeed, Honey. A food specialist says honey is non-fattening, because it consists chiefly of a form of sugar that does not add calories as other sugars do. (H. A. H.)

Answer—Dr. Harvey Wiley found the average honey contained 17.70% water, 1.90% cane sugar, 40.50% fruit sugar (fructose), 34.48% glucose (grape sugar), starch sugar, dextrose, 1.51% dextrin (gum), 0.18% mineral matter, and 3.73% undetermined. All of the sugars mentioned are equally nutritious, equally digestible, equally fattening, in my opinion. It is only in the imagination of the susceptible that one form of sugar acquires fanciful superlatives over another.

Wool Frock for Busy Days

By Lillian Mae.

Worth its weight in gold is this casual little wool dress that carries you smartly through a busy day! Pattern 4632 is a youthful Lillian Mae newcomer with an easy-going, softly tailored look. There's news in that set-in, front-buttoned belt that seems to whittle down your waistline. And there's more news in the full skirt gathered at the side front so becomingly. The neckline is convertible—button it high or turn it back into revers. You may either button the bodice to the waist, seaming the skirt down the center—or have a stunning full-length buttoning. Those high-riding pockets are chic; your sleeves may be "bracelet" length, long or short. Do choose a soft, bright color wool or a spun rayon for this dress. Pattern 4632 is available in junior miss sizes 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17. Size 13 takes 23-8 yards 54-inch fabric. Send fifteen cents (15c) in coins for this pattern. Do not send stamps. Write plainly size, name, address and style number. Are you too tall? Too short? Too plump? Too slim? If you are irregularly proportioned in any way, let the Pen-Fit Foundation Pattern 4114 take the guesswork out of dressmaking. This "basic figure" pattern is fitted and adjusted to your exact measurements in tissue; then cut out in muslin for a permanent record. Pin your dress patterns to it, make the necessary changes, and the finished frock will fit with perfection. Designed for sizes 14 to 20; 32 to 50. Size 16 requires 33-8 yards 36-inch fabric. Price 15c.

Woman's Quiz

Q. What is caviar and how is it prepared?

A. It is the salted roe of the sturgeon or some other fish. It is prepared by washing the roe with salt water, leaving it in the brine for some time, pressing it, treating it again with salt water, passing it through a hair sieve, and finally packing it in salt. Q. Please tell me how to salt fish.

A. Use medium coarse salt, one pound to each gallon of capacity. Dress and clean the fish, and place a layer of them, one deep, skin side down, tail end toward the center and cover them with a layer of salt. Repeat until the supply of fish is exhausted. The fish may be kept until needed, if the temperature does not exceed 70 degrees. A piece of board, shaped to fit the container, should be placed on top of the fish and weighted down. Q. Which part of the turkey has the most meat on it?

A. Most people would choose a leg as the meatiest part, but the breasts really have more meat. The breast meat of a high quality, dressed turkey constitutes almost one fifth of the whole bird. The chief thing to look for in choosing a dressed turkey is a broad meaty breast. Q. Why is celery blanched?

A. Blanching develops the desirable nutty flavor and makes it tender. Q. In Contract Bridge, when a player makes an opening bid of four, in a suit, how many tricks should he be able to take?

Have you a household problem to solve? Write your question clearly, sign your name and address, inclose a 3-cent postage stamp and mail to The Woman's Editor of The Constitution, 1013 Thirteenth street, Washington, D. C., for a personal reply. Don't telephone; write as directed.

Play Guitar By Diagram Method

The girl who can play the guitar—her music sets up a magic circle of warmth and friendliness, a circle in which people happily gather round her!

Learning to play the guitar is not nearly as difficult, as you may think. Simple diagrams and direction show you how to play solos and accompany a song. In your first lessons you learn to play the notes of the musical scale on the guitar strings.

By the same clear as daylight method you learn the other strings, how to play simple little tunes on your guitar. Then with more easy diagrams you learn to play accompaniments to songs and finally you're ready for full-fledged solos!

You're a somebody in your crowd when you can play the guitar! Our 24-page instruction book, Teach Yourself to Play the Guitar, explains the right technique of playing the guitar, correct fingering, where to find notes on the fingerboard. Gives rudiments of music, table of chords for accompaniments and four tunes arranged as solos. Book is 81-2 by 12 inches.

Eight Purple Stars Win Berths on All-City Football Squad

All in the Game

BY JACK TROY

Vol Analysis Burt Whitman, sports editor of the Boston Herald, was somewhat disturbed over reports he had heard in Dixie concerning the alleged rough and often tough football played by the U. of Tennessee.

Whitman, who attended the minor league baseball meeting here, sought information from Dixie writers, but what they told him only served to heighten his mental disturbance.

So, as Burt himself writes, "We went right to local headquarters, to Head Coach Bill Alexander, of Georgia Tech. Right off the reel Alex ridiculed the suggestions that the Vols played a too vigorous, too rough type of football. 'I'm just a bit afraid that you may have got your idea of over-roughness from some of the boys from New Orleans,' Alex said. 'They appear to have gathered certain ideas about playing down there this year which are peculiar, to say the least.'

"But Tennessee plays bright, hard football," Alexander continued. 'They do not hit so hard as some other teams, possibly, but they hit hard enough. We did not play them, but scouted games in which they played, and, naturally, we know a lot about their style of play.'

"There's no southern team which does so well with the kicking game as Tennessee. They specialize in all phases of the kicking game, and pay much more attention to the perfection of all kicking detail than any other team. Their games prove this to be so.

"Butler, Warren, Foxx and Thompson are backs who all can kick and do kick. They give their kickers the best of protection.

"No team in the south does so well when it comes to running back kick-offs or punts as does Tennessee. They practice those plays by the hour. Just let them wipe out one end near a boundary line and you'll see the whole team stream over there and start blocking for keeps.

"The forward pass is where the Tennessee offense packs danger, more so than the running game. They give their passer fine protection. Warren is a grand passer, both actually and as a fake passer. Tennessee uses running passes as well as any team in America, I believe. And they are drilled on these plays so well that it's really hard to tell when they'll pass or when they'll just keep on running.

"That's the way they score. They force a break with their kicking game. They handle the passing game more smartly than any team the south has had in years. But get them in front in a tough ball game and you'll see them resort to their punting game and to their general defense, which is excellent, to protect that lead."

Whitman added, "While Coach Alex conceded gridiron greatness to the Vols, he didn't feel it wise to predict a victory over Boston for the Dixie team. He had a look at the Leahys during practice at Grant Field prior to the Tulane game, and he was greatly impressed."

Top Meeting Certain claims are made as to which is the more attractive of the Bowl games. Some insist Georgetown and Miss. State will offer the top game in the Orange Bowl at Miami. Others say Texas A. & M. and Fordham will give Cotton Bowl fans the supreme thrill. Still others take Stanford and Nebraska (and they can have 'em).

The fact remains that the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans has signed up the only two major unbeaten and untied teams in America.

And none can say either Tennessee or Boston College is lacking in the essential frills of football. Both have power, speed, kicking, passing and deception.

I saw Tennessee make a shambles out of Duke. And then I saw, on widely separated Saturdays, Boston College first humble Tulane and later rout Auburn.

There could hardly be a more promising match on any

Six Smithies Given Places On 'A' Selection

North Fulton Leads With Seven Men on 'B' Outfit for 1940.

By JOHN MARTIN.

The fans and fanettes must have their all-things and all-thats. So it was more by request than by inclination and conviction that The Constitution selected what appears to be the equivalent of an official 1940 all-star football squad for Greater Atlanta.

Reporters for The Constitution covered 50-odd prep and high school games from September through December and their gleanings have been assembled with the observations of both head and assistant coaches at the various schools over the city to produce two all-star squads, one in the Class A Division and another in Class B.

PURPLE LEAD.

Boys' High, undefeated city, state and southeastern champions, placed eight men to lead the parade in the A division, North Fulton, N. G. I. C. champions for the second straight year, won six places in the B division.

Some of the all-city stars were overlooked in a recent popular vote contest, just as others perhaps as good as those herewith named, may be left in the locker room. However, the stars sifted from the ranks for this 1940 selection would be capable of winning any game in their league with something to spare.

Tech High won six places and Marist had five in the A section. G. M. A. and Commercial had two each.

OUTSTANDING CAPTAINS. Decatur and Russell pushed North Fulton for first place spots and Fulton, which won only one game, contributed two. West Fulton and Hapeville were awarded one spot each.

Captain of the brilliant A squad, which had everything, including smart quarterbacking, is Clint Castleberry, Boys' High's human eel, who, with Bill Bailey, produced the best-balanced halfbacking of the year. Ralph Slaten, big tackle, a defensive tower and outstanding blocker, was named leader of the B squad. Both captains were standouts on championship teams.

Here are the squads:
CLASS A.
 Ends—Capello and Davol, Marist, and Henson and Nixon, Tech High.
 Tackles—Fulchrott, Boys' High; Lane, Tech High; Sprayberry, Commercial; Mallof, Commercial.
 Guards—J. S. Dickerson, Marist; Cox and Leerie Jenkins, Boys' High; King, Tech High.
 Centers—DeFreese, Boys' High; Wasser, Marist; Bowen, Tech High.
 Backs—Castleberry, Bailey, Fincher and Berman, Boys' High; Anderson and Fischer, G. M. A.; Stanford, Marist; Pounds, Tech High.

CLASS B.
 Ends—Golding, Decatur; Motes, Hapeville; Newton, North Fulton; Roberts, Russell.
 Tackles—Slaten, North Fulton; Hooper, Russell; Kemerly, Decatur; J. Coleman, North Fulton.
 Guards—Fanning, Russell; Pierce, Decatur; Jameson, Fulton; Lynch, North Fulton.
 Centers—Bowen, Russell; Rambo, North Fulton.
 Backs—D. Brown, Decatur; Broyles, Decatur; Bondurant, North Fulton; Cates, North Fulton; McBrayer, Russell; Crawford, Russell; Bruce, Fulton; Dickey, West Fulton.

Crackers Play Canton Cagers Tonight at 8:30

The Atlanta Police Crackers, potentially a powerful basketball team, but lacking the organization that comes with constant and regular practice, face a sharp-shooting Canton Athletic Club quintet tonight at Warren Arena.

The main event goes on at 8:30 and there will be a good preliminary at 7:15 between National Battery and Atlanta Gas.

The Crackers won their opener last week from Cherry Foster's scrappy Toccoa five, 48-39, but lacked the smoothness of last season's powerhouse, which rolled over some of the strongest teams in the country.

Virlyn More and Bo Johnston have been unable to practice regularly with the Police outfit, but will probably see some action tonight, along with such luminaries as Slim Mitchell, Lefty Thomas, Gene Warlick, Fred Bradford and Tarzan Bloodworth.

A small admission fee will be charged.

Grid Pros' Rise Tops Trend Poll

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Sports editors throughout the country, asked to name 1940's principal trend in the annual Associated Press survey to find out which way the sports wind is blowing, have come to the conclusion the year was distinguished for its lack of any single major development.

In all, there were 18 "trends" mentioned by more than one of the 72 contributors. The closest to a truly representative answer was increased stress on offense in college football, with a resultant increase in scoring. This was mentioned by 15 men.

Eight of them noted greater interest in and attendance at professional sports events, primarily pro football games. There were seven supporters each for a boom in bowling and continued de-emphasis of college football, with Yale as the most striking sample of the latter.

Buster Mott, one of the many scat backs of which Harry Mehre had droves and droves on his Georgia teams, was featured in the play called the greatest he ever saw by Coach Mehre, and New York University's Violets were the victims in the 1937 Georgia-N. Y. U. game in the Yankee stadium in New York. Mehre's production of these swarms of scat backs, many of whom would get loose, without ever being heard of before, for amazingly long runs for touchdowns, were among the many reasons why Georgia licked Yale, for instance, with such tiresome fervor that Yale dropped the

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(UP)—Byron (Whizzer) White, Detroit Lions' halfback, captured ball-carrying honors in the National football league, according to the official figures released today. White gained 514 yards in 146 attempts to regain the title he won as a rookie with Pittsburgh in 1936.

White is the second player to win the ground gaining title twice. Cliff Battles, of Boston and Washington, accomplished the feat in 1933 and 1937. White is the first competitor to win the title in two succeeding playing years. He remained out of action in 1939, studying law at Oxford and Yale.

Johnny Drake, Cleveland Rams' fullback, took second place with 480 yards gained in 134 attempts. Tuffy Leemans, New York Giants, was third with 474 yards in 132 attempts.

Not a member of the Chicago Bears was among the six leaders. The top Bear was Ray Nolting, halfback, who placed seventh with 373 yards in 78 attempts. The Bears had so many backs that none of them played enough to carry the ball as many times as the leaders.

Paul Brown, High School Miracle Man, Boomed for Ohio State Job

Loser of One In 60 Games Would Accept

Sutherland, Blaik, Shaw and Fesler Mentioned for Job.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 17.—(P)—A miracle man of scholastic football gained prominent attention tonight in speculation over a successor to Head Coach Francis A. Schmidt at Ohio State University.

He's Paul Brown, who acts more like a classroom teacher than the mentor of a Massillon, Ohio, team that has lost only one game out of 60 in the last six years. Colorful and precision-like, his eleven have won him national recognition and attracted more fans than were drawn by any college team in Ohio except Ohio State.

Brown was described by the Cleveland News as the "probable successor" to Schmidt, who resigned Monday along with his entire coaching staff in the midst of a university investigation of the coaching situation which followed Ohio's worst season in 15 years.

Others considered.

University spokesmen, pointing out that all talk of a new coach at this time was "purely speculation," said Brown as well as a half dozen outstanding coaches would be considered.

Brown, who was here two days last week, said at Massillon that he had talked with alumni representatives about the job, but had not contacted "anyone in authority."

"I would be definitely interested in receiving an offer to coach at Ohio State," he said, adding that it would be "the fulfillment of a life-time ambition."

A coach who stresses perfection in every detail, Brown puts on the field a team that sparkles with speed and clever ball-handling—a type of play favored by Ohio fans, who turned out in record numbers to see razzle-dazzle performances of Schmidt's teams.

Most prominently mentioned besides Brown were Jack Sutherland, former Pitt coach; Earl Blaik, of Dartmouth; Buck Shaw, of Santa Clara; Wesley Fesler, of Connecticut Wesleyan; Marty Karow, of Texas A. & M.; and Earl Martineau, of Michigan. Fesler and Karow are former Ohio stars.

DELAY EXPECTED.

Athletic Director L. W. St. John expected to see most of the candidates at the National Football Coaches' meeting in New York December 30-31 and probably will not recommend to the athletic board a candidate until then.

St. John is understood to favor young men for the post, which Schmidt had held seven years.

Selection of a coach is expected to be made within the next month in order to give the new man an opportunity of mapping plans for spring football practice.

"GOOD LUCK, COACH"—Buch McCulloch (standing) and Father Dagneau, Marist College head (seated right), had their last get-together with Louis Van Houten, Marist football coach, last night at the school's annual football banquet. Van Houten leaves for Fort Benning Sunday to join the army. McCulloch is prominently mentioned as Van Houten's possible successor as Marist football coach.

Marist Bids Louis Van Houten Farewell at Annual Banquet

21 Cadets Receive Jackets; Elmer Layden Inquires About Center Joe Wasser, Who Will Probably Enter Tech.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

Marist bade farewell to their popular football coach, Louis Van Houten, last night at their annual football banquet at which 21 grid stalwarts received jackets for their great work during the season.

On the eve of his departure for Fort Benning and a year of life in Uncle Sam's Army, Van Houten was presented a beautiful watch for himself and a lovely bracelet for his wife. It was a token of the 1940 grid team's esteem for their coach, Charles Fitzgerald, stellar guard, made the presentation.

Eighteen gridriders were presented with jackets for their fine play this year, and the four senior members of the eleven—Jack McCulloch, Joe Wasser, Harry Capallo and Ruppert Davol—received gold footballs.

Father P. H. Dagneau, head of the Ivy street institution, served as toastmaster at the banquet, and made a short talk expressing regret that the school was losing its fine coach. Jack Troy, sports editor of The Constitution, also made a short talk.

Among those present were Buch McCulloch, who has helped Van Houten with his coaching duties through the years, and Dr. J. V. Pierotti, team physician.

It was learned that Coach Elmer Layden, of Notre Dame has written Marist regarding Joe Wasser, brilliant Marist center, who graduates this year. Joe will probably go to Georgia Tech, Notre Dame also wanted Tackle Ed Ryckley, who is now a freshman at Tech. It seems the scouts at The Flats are on their toes.

Players awarded sweaters included Tommy Stanford, J. D. Berry, Charlie Davol and Benny Dickinson, backs; and Bill Williams, James King, Theo Leres, Jack Mays, Henry Norwood, Buck Kelly, Neil Sneekar, J. R. Dickerson, Charles Fitzgerald, Alvin Hutcheson, Jim Maher, Walter Lewis and Jack Buchlah, linemen.

Peacock To Hear Alexander, Dodd

W. A. Alexander and Bobby Dodd, of the Georgia Tech coaching staff, will be the guests of honor at a football banquet Friday evening at the Colonial Terrace hotel when the members of the 1940 six-man squad of the Peacock School will be awarded letters, it was announced yesterday by F. L. Whalen, Peacock's athletic director.

Also attending will be Peacock School faculty members and parents of the ball players.

Following the dinner Coach Alexander will speak and there will be a showing of motion pictures of Georgia Tech games.

Nebraska Eleven Goes West Today

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 17.—(P)—With the temperature at 17 degrees above zero, Coach Lawrence M. Jones took his Nebraska football squad onto the snow-banked Stadium field today for a 40-minute workout. Tomorrow the Huskers will leave Lincoln and its snow for Phoenix, Ariz., where Jones will spend eight days getting his boys ready for the Rose Bowl game New Year's Day against Stanford. All of the squad, with the exception of Fullback Vike Francis, who was busy in the classroom, took part in the outside workout.

TRACK TO OPEN.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 17.—(P) Possible resumption of racing at the Fair Grounds track here, perhaps as early as next month, loomed today.

Rusty Jackets Score 2 Times, But Need Work

Alex To Scrimmage Tech Every Day in Drills for Bears.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

Those who like the going rough will have a wonderful time out at Tech the rest of this week. The Yellow Jackets will scrimmage every day in preparation for their December 20 joust with the California Golden Bears at Grant field.

Yesterday Coach Alexander put the Techs through their first scrimmage since they resumed practice a few days ago for the California tilt. The varsity found the layout had made them a bit rusty and their timing on offensive maneuvers was not all it might have been, but Alex considered their performance satisfactory for the first outing.

In the 45 minutes of rough work the varsity managed to score a couple of touchdowns while holding a team composed of freshmen and Red Devils to no scores and practically no ground gained.

The first time they had the ball the first-stringers drove some 60 yards to a score with Hancock, Bosch and Plaster picking up some nice yardage en route. Bosch set up the score with a 20-yard romp around end to the 1, and Plaster drove over, and kicked the extra point.

The other score came shortly after Red Muehrth broke through to block a punt. Bosch passed to Sprayberry for about 15, and Hancock went the last 20 on a nice reverse play. Bosch kicked the extra point.

That was all the scoring done through the stubborn Red Devil-Freshmen line, and the varsity passes were not clicking up to standard at all. Roy Goree came into the scrimmage late and did some nice line ramming, however.

With the Yellow Jackets in the best shape of the year, Coach Alex hopes to get their offense clicking before the Red Devils and Freshmen leave Sunday for the Christmas holidays. Unless injuries occur between now and December 28 all regulars will be in shape to play some. Even Jim Wright, whose injured ankle has slowed him down considerably, will be ready to play some. He will have the troublesome spur removed from his ankle after the season is over.

Alabama Defeats Florida in Second

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Dec. 17.—(P)—Alabama's basketball team staged a second-half rally here tonight to shade Florida's 'Gators, 28-22, as Center Sam Sharpe led the way with 10 points.

Trailing 12-10 at the half, the Tide came in with a fast finish. Florida won, 38-34, in the first game.

The game marked the first time this season that Ellish, Florida center, has been held to less than 10 points.

Local Basketball

DIXIE STEEL VS. SEARS.

General Shoe's fast-moving quintet, co-leaders of the Wadsworth City League, will find plenty of opposition on hand when it collides with Dixie Steel's determined Sears & Roebuck aggregation in the feature attraction on tonight's program at Fulton High gymnasium.

The tilt is scheduled for 8 o'clock. B. Rainey, General Shoe forward and the league's leading scorer, will be the man Sears will have to keep under control if they hope to carry off top honors. He has registered 56 counters in three games thus far. Sears has dropped one contest and must take this one to stay in the running for the first-half title.

Dick Dodgen's Dixie Steel boys and Georgia Power, two powerful aggregations, will open the card at 7 o'clock. Four Squares and Central Cafe's 8 o'clock battle will pull one or the other out of the cellar.

WEDNESDAY'S SCHEDULE.

7 O'clock: Dixie Steel vs. Georgia Power Co.

8 O'clock: Central Cafe vs. Four Squares.

9 O'clock: Sears & Roebuck vs. General Shoe.

Sewell Service and Miller Service, two former city championship outfits, will clash in the top attraction on the Wadsworth City League card at Y. W. C. A. The game will spill the perfect record of one of the two teams.

WEDNESDAY'S SCHEDULE.

7 O'clock: Lithonia vs. Sears & Roebuck.

Duckpin Executive Arrives Today To Make Survey Here

The executive secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, A. L. (Arville) Ebersole, will arrive in Atlanta this afternoon from national headquarters at Washington for a preliminary survey of the southeastern territory, prior to the staging of the national tournament on the downtown Atlanta alleys in the spring.

Ebersole will confer with Morgan Blake, president of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, Walter L. Lason, southern assistant secretary, and John S. Blick, operator of the alleys where the national tournament will be staged.

After spending several days in Atlanta, the executive secretary will make a tour of Georgia, Florida, Alabama and the Carolinas, where he will contact bowling officials with a view to building up a record entry of bowlers for the national here April 19 through April 27, 1941.

Heretofore, the southeast has had a very small representation of entries at the national pin classic, but with the site of the contest to be held in the "deep south" for the first time in the history of the duckpin game, splendid representation is virtually assured.

Ebersole was unanimously chosen to fill the position of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress' executive secretary last spring, when the post was vacated by the unexpected death of George L. Isemann.

Most Thrilling Play I've Seen

Gawgians from the New Haven schedule.

But recalling Mott's memorable feat, Coach Mehre says:

"It was the second half kickoff in the 1931 N. Y. U.-Georgia game in New York and we were trailing, 6-0. Our team received, facing the glare of the sun.

"The kick-off went away, way up, and Buster Mott, waiting almost on our goal line for the ball, lost it in the sun's blazing rays. Buster dropped back a few steps into the shade of the stadium so he could see the ball and waited.

"Suddenly Buster stepped forward and grabbed the piskin on our three-yard line. Ripper Roberts, Catfish Smith, Patterson, Maddox and the other Georgia boys quickly formed a flying wedge and started down the field, knocking N. Y. U. players this way and that, with Buster trotting breezily along. Those Georgia boys quickly formed a flying wedge and started down the field, knocking N. Y. U. boys ran together like boxcars as Buster gave the N. Y. U. tacklers the good old hip hip; gave them one foot and took two away in an amazing burst of broken-field running and kept going, down, down, down, on down as one after another of the N. Y. U. boys failed to bring him down.

"Yes, sir, Buster took that ball and dodged, side-stepped, raced, and fought 97 yards to a touchdown in the greatest play I ever saw. We won the game, 7-6, when Catfish Smith split the uprights with the extra point."

7 Braces Are Run, 12 Coveys Found

SUMTER, S. C., Dec. 17.—(P)—Seven braces of dogs were run in the all-age stakes of the annual South Carolina field trials today with Maplerock Jake, a pointer owned by R. Z. Cates, of Spartanburg, leading the field. The running will be completed Thursday morning.

Twelve coveys were found in the seven courses run by the 14 dogs, but scenting conditions were rather poor. Seventeen more dogs will run before the event ends. Judges are Henry Banks, of Guerryon, Ala., and Major Trammel Scott, of Atlanta, president of the Southern Baseball Association.

Tigers Won't Play Night Home Games

DETROIT, Dec. 17.—(P)—The Detroit Tigers will not play night baseball at home in 1941, it was announced today by Walter O. Briggs, president of the club. Briggs, who is in Chicago en route from Phoenix, Ariz., to his winter home at Miami Beach, Fla., made the announcement through the Detroit Baseball Company office here.

Early in the 1940 season Briggs announced he had asked engineers to make an estimate of the cost of installing lights at Briggs stadium, home of the Tigers.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT-ELECT, MR. WALLACE

Romm Is Elected U. S. Warned

B'nai Brith Leader Mendel Romm was elected president of Gate City Lodge, No. 144, B'nai Brith, last night at the annual election meeting of officers for 1941. Romm, first vice president for the past year, succeeds Julian V. Boehm, who was named monitor.

Eugene Oberdorfer was elected first vice president, Frank Gottesman, second vice president; and Louis C. Long, third vice president. Dr. Sinclair Jacobs became treasurer, and Berry Rittenbaum was re-elected secretary. Henry H. Alexander is honorary life president.

Rabbi Harry H. Epstein, a former president, spoke on "Eyes Forward to 1941."

Stressing the part aviation plays in naval operations, he declared that the navy's air corps is "indispensable to the fleet; and in efficiency, I am proud to state, it is not surpassed by any other naval aviation in the world."

Then reviewing what he described as a "few thoughts which I have often expressed during the last year," Stark warned: "Potential strength and wishful thinking are not enough."

"We must translate our potential strength into immediate readiness and once attained—we must stay ready."

"The value of time and timing is more important than ever before."

Kitty Foyle

by
CHRISTOPHER MORLEY
A Story of the American White-Collar Girl

INSTALLMENT XV.
I know now what they call it. Adolescence. What a dumb word for a sweet thing. A skinny kid in dirty fish-smell overalls, black hair sticky with salt under a straw hat, bare brown feet in sneakers, and broken fingernails, leaning over a scow and thinking she's the Lady of the Lake. The hot yellow sun spreads out into the flopping brown water like cream in iced coffee, you can't see far into it, only your crabbing line sloping down in shadow. You can't see far down, old lady; good thing, too; it's sweet, the not knowing; and you couldn't possibly guess how lovely it can all get to be; things that it you knew about them would only scare you or shame you. No one can tell you till you're ready to be told; and there's few will ever tell you need. Maybe there aren't enough silly things to go round among all the women who need to be told them.

What's the first thing people do when they love each other? They begin to make up a language of their own that doesn't mean anything to anyone else. I guess that is what the Shore was doing to me those times Pop and I went down. It was telling me things I didn't even need, yet, to know what they meant. When I say the Shore, I don't have to be shy with myself, I mean God or Time. As soon as you begin to fret and worry about meanings, you've lost that something in you that makes it possible to know them.

Come to me, my beautiful, and tell me what I mean.

I'm the Lady of the Lake.

"Pop, what's a shallop?"

"They're good with tartar sauce."

"No, a shallop. Some kind of a boat. We had it in poetry."

"Canoe, I guess. Pull up your line, Kitty, I'll bet those crabs have ate up all your bait."

"I hope they have, I don't want to smell it again."

Sometimes the skipper was slow in bringing his motorboat to tow us back.

"Judas priest, ain't that old fool coming after us? We'll miss supper at the house. Listen, Kitty, take off your shirt and wave it at him, maybe he'll see it. I'm too crippled up to peep mine."

I did, but didn't hurry that boatman much.

I got mixed up which summer was which; it didn't matter. We went down to Tidewood several times. I know it was the summer of '25 we made the embarrassing visit to Cape May. It was the first time I suffered the big female problem. Nothing to wear.

Sunday mornings, like everybody else we sat on the boarding house piazza and read the Public Ledger. I used to be fascinated by the society notes and wondered how the papers got to know so much about what Mr. and Mrs. Swarthmore Comly or the F. X. Haddonfield Berwyns were doing at Narragansett and Bar Harbor.

At that time Molly Schart and I were conducting a make-believe correspondence in which she played the part of Mrs. Rosemont Rittenhouse and I was Mrs. B. Cynwyd Lloyd. It was absurd but it was a good game. Molly, writing as Mrs. Rittenhouse, would tell me what a time she was having because she and Rosy had to entertain the Prince of Wales and all their hunters had fallen sick and they would have to use their polo ponies to chase the fox; and worse still Sears Roebuck was all out of mail-order foxes and may-be they'd have to chase the Deaugh boys instead. What would the Prince think of that? And I would reply with some social dilemma supposedly agitating the breast of Mrs. Lloyd.

But one day I forgot to cover up an envelope I had just addressed to Mrs. Rosemont Rittenhouse care Miss Molly Schart, Thanksgiving Ave., Manitou, Ill. Pop happened to see it and said, "What the hell's this?" I explained the game, and Pop was amused, but said not to put names like that on the outside of the letter. Some clerk at the post office, who knew damn well Mrs. Rosemont Rittenhouse wasn't in Illinois—there never was much secret about where the Rittenhouses were spending the heated

SYNOPSIS.
This is the story of Kitty Foyle, the all-American white collar girl. She is telling it to herself, musing as most of us do sometimes, so it is all very confidential, and true. As she looks back over her twenty-eight years she realizes that she has lived the last ten of it. From her Pennsylvania Dutch mother came her stubborn courage, from her Irish father came her humor, her sentiment and her dreams. Dear old Pop with his whiskey, his rheumatism and his cricket! It was Pop who had really taught her what it was all about and he had taught Wynn cricket. It was through Pop and his cricket Wynn had come along. Wynn, and all that love could mean, but somehow the folks are narrower than Pop, even to a small girl just beginning to grow up. However, she and her pals are making the best of this painful process. But now Kitty, after attending school in the mid-west, from the home of her Aunt and Uncle, is back home in Philly for her vacation. . . . she and her Pop are at the shore. AND NOW KITTY FOYLE TALKS:

term—might put the correct address on it and she'd really get the letter and be sure.

"Rosey's one of the grandest guys in the world," said Pop. "He hit three boundaries in one over, against the Gentlemen of England when they were touring here. He used to be muscle-bound until I taught him how to loosen up when the bowler's arm rises. I never thought I was going to be the one that's muscle-bound now. You know, Kitty, the Gentlemen of England used to come over here to play cricket. All they come over for now is to pull wool in Washington."

When I would read out some big society page name Pop could always place it his own way. Mrs. Reggie Montgomery maybe wore a white camellia at the assembly, and a foaming mass of white tulle, but Pop remembered that he got 56 against Reggie's bowling when Frankford played Merion C. C. in 1904.

"As a matter of fact," said Pop, looking up from a foaming mass of Sunday Ledger, "I see Rosey's down at Cape May right now."

I never told Pop, but I myself sent that note to the paper saying that Mr. Thomas Foyle and his daughter, Miss Katherine Foyle, were spending the summer at "Ocean View," Tidewood Crest, while Mr. J. McGregor Foyle was remaining at "his residence" in Frankford. They printed it in South Jersey Jottings, omitting the allusion to poor Mac. Pop thought it was very enterprising and of the Ocean View, of course, the whole point was to send the clipping to Molly; it started her on a busy campaign to get her name mentioned somehow in the Manitou Argus.

Only a few days after that Pop was hobnobbing along Ocean avenue on his way to the bootlegger, he met Mr. Rittenhouse driving through it some yachting at Barnegat. Pop was very pleased because Mr. Rittenhouse gave him a lift to the bootlegger's, ordered a whole case of pinch-bottle on Pop's recommendation, brought the old man back to Ocean View in the car, and invited us down to Cape May for dinner the following Sunday.

That's when I first had the Nothing to Wear jitters. It was true too, it always is. At a seashore boarding house a kid of 14 isn't likely to have any Rittenhouse sort of clothes. All I had with me was the old straw suit-case.

"If he'd asked us for lunch," I said, "I could have worn my blue middie and the white linen skirt, but for dinner you don't know what they may pull on us."

"Judas priest," Kitty, I didn't know you were going to be that sort of a girl."

"Every girl is that sort of a girl."

"It's your Germantown blood coming out," he said. "All right, all right, we'll go downtown and find something chiffoff."

That's exactly what we did, and it was terrible. I didn't know any better, and let the old man pick out for me a kind of yellow gauzy thing with blue flowers on it, what Pop called hysteria blossoms. It was much too old for me, and much too sheer. My poor little camisole I was so proud of showed through like everybody's business. Of course the party turned out to be Sunday evening buffet supper and everybody in outdoor sports clothes; just the exactly correct kind of informality and a colored butler in a white coat passing mint juleps. I felt like a fool and everybody was so terribly kind it made me feel worse. Also I was ashamed of having used Mrs. Rittenhouse's name in fun because she saw my trouble and was grand to me. A big South Jersey moon came up and we all went down on the beach, at the foot of their lovely lawn, because, as Rosey said, "something might have been cast up by the sea." It had, sure enough; something with ice in it.

Pop took more than he should, but he had a notable time; Rosey played up to him with cricket reminiscences and we all sang songs and pretended that the bonfire would keep away the mosquitoes. Mrs. Rittenhouse lent me a polo coat to cover my chiffoff and as long as we were out in the dark it wasn't so bad. But I thought I'd never get Pop to leave. The chauffeur drove us all the way back to Tidewood, and I know I was cross and humiliated.

"Great country," South Persey. Pop said, "Rosey don't need to talk about Bah Habbah and Newport. We got the greatest air on the Atlantic coast. Even makes my fingers tingle."

"That kind of a tingle comes in bottles," I said.

I guess now it was probably high blood pressure or something. It was well on in summer when Pop and I came home. I know the blue morning glories were out on the stone wall of the Penny-packer place. Griscom street seemed small and dark after all that sunlight at Tidewood.

Those Frankford summers were all pretty much the same. Once and a while someone would come and drive Pop over to Manheim to see a cricket match at the Germantown C. C. I'd try to see that he always had a clean pair of his old flannel pants so he'd feel natural round the pavilion. Usually they asked him to keep score and that tickled him, but he said he couldn't do it right unless he had flannels on. It didn't matter they'd shrunk because he was shrinking, too.

When you think back you can see it don't matter so much what actually happened as what kind of a pattern it leaves in your mind.

Continued Tomorrow.

What every Soldier and his Family should Know.

by CAPT. GENE MORGAN.

How strict will Army discipline be? Will the Army take into consideration the fact that the draftees did not volunteer for service?

Discipline for the draftee will be the same as for every other member of the Army of the United States—strict, and wisely and impartially administered.

For the recruit obedience begins by responding promptly and cheerfully to the command of his squad leader, a corporal. He soon learns that his immediate superiors—non-commissioned and commissioned officers—are equally subject to commands and orders from those above them.

Having taken the oath which automatically inducts him into the Army, he automatically becomes amenable to all Army rules and regulations. Certain of the Articles of War will be read and explained to him at the time of his induction.

These articles define offenses which are punishable under military jurisdiction, upheld by the Constitution of the United States. Military tribunals are provided to try offenders according to varying degrees in the gravity of their offenses.

The policy of the Army of the United States with regard to the above questions is best expressed in a directive to all commands recently issued by General George

C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, which stated in part:

"... there must be no pampering of individuals, no distinctions between men because of their previous military experience or condition of entry into the service. . . . the Army must now proceed with its high purpose of welding from the elements of American democracy a disciplined, seasoned fighting force capable of defending the Nation."

Tomorrow: Do soldiers ever get a day off?

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Astrologist.

What today means to you if you were born between: March 21st and April 19th (Aries)—It might be well to give business and social associates every consideration before 11:30 p. m., for you are apt to encounter a let-down and feeling of coldness. The new or extraordinary should be given a wide berth. Co-operation with others, however, will be valuable for the future. The day favors minor affairs and hard work. April 20th and May 20th (Taurus)—The outstanding influences operating throughout the entire day are such that may overpower your reason or logic. The period does not favor taking chances. The new or extraordinary should be given a wide berth. Co-operation with others, however, will be valuable for the future. The day favors minor affairs and hard work. May 21st and June 20th (Gemini)—The day favors writing, communications, trial changes, new attachments. A great deal should be accomplished in inventive or scientific work. An auspicious day for dealing with older people and for matters related to the land. June 21st and July 22nd (Cancer)—Use caution around shipping and in transportation. Irritability, hastiness and sarcasm should be held in check and give attention to practical matters. July 23rd and August 22nd (Leo)—During the morning hours and until 4 p. m., you may find yourself running around in circles, doing needless things, or not being able to avoid doing affairs that are useless. After 4 p. m. favors work calling for diplomacy, correspondence, general business and travel. August 23rd and September 22nd (Virgo)—Previous to 1:30 p. m. will be a time when your optimism is likely to be at a low ebb, bringing a tendency towards nervousness, with hindrances and delays in new beginnings. The period does not particularly favor dealings with older people or matters that you desire to consummate quickly. Between 1:30 p. m. and 2:30 p. m. does not particularly favor dealings with women. After 2:30 p. m. and continuing through the evening hours, you should encounter greater harmony and peace. September 23rd and October 22nd (Libra)—Plan to get in your best work, or ask favors before 11:42 a. m. An auspicious day for dealings with those in professional pursuits, banking, educational work and finances. October 23rd and November 21st (Scorpio)—An excellent day for carrying out mechanical and industrial ideas, work connected with iron, steel or firearms. The best aspects of the day operate previous to 11:45 a. m. November 22nd and December 21st (Sagittarius)—It might be well to give business and social associates every consideration before 11:30 p. m., for you are apt to encounter a let-down feeling, or meet with coldness, which will retard matters. After 11:30 p. m. favors activity whether you use your energies in sports or business, or merely in disposing of the work at hand quietly. December 22nd and January 19th (Capricorn)—More can be accomplished in the hours previous to 1:30 p. m. if you will stick to routine, and do not allow yourself to be drawn into changes of a casual nature. Between 1:30 p. m. and 11:30 p. m. you should be able to get down to business in all directions. January 20th and February 18th (Aquarius)—The hours previous to 1:30 p. m. favor constructive developments in contracts and contacts with others. An excellent period to promote improvements in the ordinary pursuits, for you will feel a mental inspiration, which will allow you to plan ahead. Between 1:30 p. m. and 6:12 p. m. the tendency will likely be towards haste, and therefore avoid taking on obligations and heavy work. February 19th and March 20th (Pisces)—Previous to 9:22 a. m. be very cautious in matters relating to land and property. Affairs started at this time may have a tendency to be delayed, or at least will not prove as profitable as expected. Between 9:22 a. m. and 8:38 p. m. may be considered auspicious for personal improvement, popularity, for changes for original ideas, and affairs dealing with transportation. However, be sure that you understand new propositions thoroughly before you enter into them.

ALLEN—The 10-year-old kid who started the Fred Allen-Jack Benny feud back in 1936 will guest on the Star Theater when Allen interviews Stuart Kanin, now 14 years old, over WGST at 8 o'clock tonight.

Back in 1936, Allen had the then 10-year-old violinist on his show and he played "The Bee." Fred mentioned that it was a wonderful thing for a kid of 10 to be able to play "The Bee" when Jack Benny couldn't even get through one chorus of "Love in Bloom." From then on the feud was on and today it's radio history. Kenny Baker will sing "Meanie" and "Dream" and Al Goodman's orchestra will be heard.

COMEDY—Dat little guy Cantor, with help from a kid named Aldrich—front name Henry, alias Ezra Stone—will try to give de winks to Bertram de Blood before Bertam gives de hot spot or else. Bobby Sherwood, de kid at de jukebox, has found him some tunes to fit de occasion in case it calls for slow music, solemn and sweet. If it don't, Eddie will sing "There's a Great Day Coming" and Dinah will put de slug on "Taking a Chance on Love." Dey may, anyway!

BIG TOWN—Steve Wilson seeks a new angle on Christmas news stories in "Christmas Is News," the "Big Town" show to be heard over WGST at 8 o'clock tonight with Edward G. Robinson starred. What he discovers makes dramatic entertainment.

Opposite Robinson will be heard Ona Munson, who plays Lorelei Kilbourne, the star reporter of the paper. A highly emotional musical background has been composed by Leith Stevens, who conducts the 20-piece orchestra. Crane Wilbur produces "Big Town." Ken and Nadia Niles do the commercials.

DRAMA—The story of a prankster's victim unwittingly collecting a prize he had not yet won, having to return it and then, after considerable embarrassment, finding himself declared winner of the slogan contest will be presented in Manhattan at Midnight, over WAGA at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Deserted by all but his girl friend, the victim will find lovely Marion Shockley "befriending" him in the feminine lead of the work entitled, "Christmas in July." The drama was adapted for radio from the recent movie story by Frank Dolan.

Sugar Fuel Runs Cars.

Power alcohol is being produced in Uganda as a by-product of the sugar factories, and fuel for Diesel engines is being made from cottonseed oil, it is reported in Entebbe, British East Africa. Arrangements are under way in East Africa to set up technical committees for research into production of substitute fuels because of the importance of conserving gasoline supplies. Kenya has just added four cents a gallon consumption tax.

Soldier Repays Army.

When a private in the ranks paid the army $2,000 "for all it was doing for him," the officer in command of the Australian Imperial Forces camp in Sydney, Australia, was not a bit stunned. "How much does a fully equipped ambulance cost?" the soldier had asked. "About $2,000," said the officer. The soldier immediately wrote out a check for the amount, and the army has one more new ambulance.

Princess, Nazi Youth Ordered To Leave U. S.

Hungarian and Student Declared German Sympathizers.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—The Justice Department denied today the application of Maria Waldenburg, the Princess Hohenlohe, of Hungary, for extension of a visitor's permit and ordered her to leave the country by December 21.

At the same time, Attorney General Jackson announced his approval of a recent immigration service order refusing to extend the temporary visitor's permit of Karl Scheuring, 18, described as a citizen of Germany and an avowed Nazi, who is a student at the University of Denver.

The department did not make public the reason for the denial of Princess Hohenlohe's request. It was explained privately that the Princess' presence was considered "inimical" to this country's best interests because of her close association with Nazis.

Princess Hohenlohe was with Captain Fritz Weidmann, the German consul at San Francisco, the department said, when Federal Bureau of Investigation agents located her to advise her of the decision.

The Princess, whose full title is Princess Stephanie Hohenlohe Waldenburg Schillingfurst, arrived at New York on the S. S. Veendam on December 22, 1939, from London, traveling on a Hungarian passport.

Discussing the Scheuring case, the Immigration Service said Scheuring came to this country July 20, 1939, with his mother, a native of the United States, who lost her citizenship by marrying a German and who has since returned to Germany.

Young Scheuring presented the Nazi viewpoint in a number of speeches around Denver, which "aroused some local excitement, both pro and con," the opinion continued.

The refusal to renew his permit brought protests from "a substantial number of United States citizens," it added. They objected that the youth spoke only on the invitation of Americans and that he had not engaged in subversive activities.

"But this is not the whole story," the opinion said. "We do not know that young Scheuring is not engaged in subversive activities. We only know that we cannot prove the contrary. And we do know that young Germans abroad, if they are good Nazis, do what they are told."

"Much more important, we know that a good Nazi in the event of a crisis will not hesitate to betray the hospitality of a country in which he is a guest. The history of the last two years leaves no room for dispute upon this point."

"Karl Scheuring, by his own statement, is a good Nazi. Replying to questions by an immigrant inspector, he was frank. He said that he believed in the aphorism that 'might makes right.' When asked if he was in sympathy with the present Nazi government, Scheuring answered, 'Yes.' He also boasted, 'I am a subject of Nazi Germany and proud of it.'"

"These statements are conclusive as to the proper disposition of the present application."

FOR PEACE—Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., son of the United States Ambassador to Great Britain, is a member of a new peace group formed by Harvard students.

Kennedy's Son Joins Harvard Peace Group

Teddy Roosevelt's Grandson Also Is Member of Committee.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 17.—(AP)—A group of Harvard students announced today the formation of a new peace group, the Harvard Committee Against Military Intervention in Europe, and listed Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., son of the United States ambassador to Great Britain, as one of its members.

In a statement announcing formation of the new organization, the committee said:

"Since contrary to the assertions of the Committee for Militant Aid to Britain, there is every reason to believe that America is not now at war, it is incumbent upon us to consider the possibility of remaining at peace."

Quentin Roosevelt, a grandson of former President Theodore Roosevelt, and Tudor Gardiner, of Gardiner, Maine, son of a former governor of Maine, also were listed as members.

"NO FOREIGN WAR" DRIVE IS LED BY EDITOR

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP)—NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP)—A 51-year-old newspaper editor who said he learned to hate war as an ambulance driver at Verdun, has organized a group to "help keep the nation out of war."

A statement issued by the organization, known as the No Foreign War Committee, said the purpose was "to give articulation to the hopes and prayers of millions of Americans who know if they are dragged once again into the economic and political conflicts of the Old World, only complete world chaos can result."

The statement declared that the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, headed by another editor, William Allen White, of Emporia, Kan., was developing "exactly the same public psychology as that which was carefully created during the war period preceding our declaration of hostilities in April, 1917," and that much of that committee's "success" was due to lack of opposition to its efforts.

"It is the purpose of the No Foreign War Committee to provide that voice," the statement said.

Tomorrow Is Last Day To Pay Taxes

County Tax Collector T. Earle Suttles again warned Fulton county taxpayers that tomorrow is the final day that 1940 state and county ad valorem can be paid without penalty.

Suttles said because of the county's budget law there will be no extension of the time for payment. All taxes not paid by tomorrow will be subject to 11. fas. and 7 per cent interest, he added.

Talmadge Is Feted By Clayton Group

Clayton county supporters of Governor-elect Talmadge entertained the incoming governor last night at a fish fry at Jester's Old mill, near Jonesboro.

Before leaving Atlanta for Jonesboro, Talmadge said he planned "just to sit around and laugh and eat fish with my friends."

Among those attending were Judge James C. Davis, of the Stone Mountain circuit, and Senator-elect H. B. (Hell Bent) Edwards.

British Launch Fierce Attack Against Bardia

Three More Italian Forts Are Taken in Offensive.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Reuters, British news agency, reported British mechanized units have begun an attack on Bardia, Italian base 15 miles inside Libya, and that severe fighting is in progress.

The agency reported that British mechanized units were carrying out a "formidable attack" on the perimeter of Bardia's defenses, with advanced forces of infantry following up and truck loads of supplies and ammunition bringing up the rear.

Meanwhile from Cairo, Britain's army in Africa reported the capture of three more Italian frontier forts.

The offensive, far from slackening as had been expected in some quarters with the ouster of the last invading Italian, from Egypt, appeared actually to be gathering power, the British command declaring:

"Pressure on the enemy is steadily increasing as new forces arrive."

The offensive, far from slackening as had been expected in some quarters with the ouster of the last invading Italian, from Egypt, appeared actually to be gathering power, the British command declaring:

"Pressure on the enemy is steadily increasing as new forces arrive."

The latest Italian outposts to fall to the British, an official communiqué said, were the forts of Musaid, Sidi Omar and Sherferzen. Their occupation, along with the previously reported seizure of Fort Capuzzo, put the British in control of a substantial segment of the eastern Libyan border area.

The drive upon coastal Bardia—which had been reported under bombardment by the British Mediterranean fleet and Royal Air Force in an effort to reduce its defenses—threatened an important Fascist line of communication, for that town commands the coastal road westward to Tobruk, the strongest Italian military center in Libya.
